MAYOR SENDS 2 BOYS AND MAN TO FIX AIRPORT

They Get Off to Slow Start, Because They Had To Borrow Tools.

WOLFF IN DARK ON MOVE

Director, Named By Law To Supervise $5,000 Job, Knows Nothing of It.

A man and two boys have started work on Mansfield's $5,000 airport maintenance and improvement program.

They worked yesterday, and would have worked all of this morning, but they didn't have the tools.

They were employed by Mayor William J. Locke, they said.

It seemed apparent that the mayor had assumed complete authority over the expenditure of the money appropriated by council for the airport project, despite the fact that he legislation specifically stated that the work was to be done under the supervision of the service-safety director.

Service Director Fred Wolff said today he had no knowledge of the employment of any men for the airport work but added:

"The mayor may have sent some out."

Airport Manager James R. Harrington said today that Mayor Locke "had promised" him the entire improvement program would be carried out and that the men would remain on the job until it was finished.

The projected work, outlined several days ago by Harrington, includes the lengthening of one runway 1,000 feet, leveling, rolling and filling in low spots on the runways and the repair of damaged drainage system. It also included the construction of runway markers.

Matthias (Pop) Elias, elderly athletic equipment custodian at Senior high school, is supervising the work. He said he was hired by Mayor Locke, Friday.

His assistants are Jack Sayler, 20, and Howard Hershey, 21.

Elias when told this morning that the city had $5,000 to spend on the airport said it would take "at least five years for his two-boy crew to get the job done."

He said however, he wasn't worried much because he expected to go back to work at the school late in August.

Elias and the boys didn't get

Oil Arrives, City To Apply It On 2 Mansfield Streets

Mansfield's long-awaited and much-delayed street oiling program started to get under way today with the arrival of a carload and a half of oil but Service-Safety Director Fred B. Wolff said that only two streets would be treated.

Although 157 streets and 94 alleys were oiled to keep dust down last year—dust which has been plaguing Mansfield housewives for several weeks already—Director Wolff said today that only Cline avenue and Howard streets could be oiled with the limited amount of oil received.

So far no steps have been taken to obtain other materials to dust-proof unpaved streets since oil has been difficult to obtain. Calcium chloride was used to settle dust on all unimproved Richland county highways.

Wolff said that the oil would be placed on Cline avenue and Howard street because they served as an important link in the city's bus transportation system.

"People along these streets have an almost continuous stream of

Tells Firsthand Story of Burning of Three Japanese Aircraft Carriers After Watching Battle From Raft

(By United Press)

PEARL HARBOR—A young navy ensign, in a bullet-riddled rubber raft afloat amid the Japanese fleet, saw three aircraft carriers burst into flames under the attack of American planes.

Ensign George H. Gay, jr., 25, Houston, Tex., told his story at the naval hospital here.

He had just launched a torpedo at one of the carriers when his plane was shot down. He was wounded. His companions were killed.

Gay clambered aboard the rubber raft, which floated to him from the wreckage of his plane. There with Japanese cruisers and destroyers racing all about him, he watched the battle for hours.

He saw one of Japan's two largest aircraft carriers, of the 26,900-ton Kaga class, in flames when he came fully to his senses—possibly a victim of his torpedo.

He watched navy dive bombers go into action, through an inferno of anti-aircraft fire.

The other carrier of the Kaga class—there are only two—and a smaller carrier burst into flames.

Gay, each instant in danger of his life, watched fascinated while flames shot up and smoke billowed from the three stricken carriers as their now helpless planes hovered over them, and he saw smoke and flame leap into the sky as great explosions ripped through their hulls.

When the dive bomber attack ended one of the Kaga carriers was aflame from bow to stern.

Gay saw vain attempts to rescue the crews. He saw a Japanese cruiser pump shells into one of the carriers in an attempt

Midway Victory Seen as Start Of Sea Drive

Midway Reports Indicate Enemy Losses Mounting With Two Biggest Japanese Aircraft Carriers Sunk; Americans Expected To Start Next Clash.

(By United Press)

PEARL HARBOR—United States forces may take the offensive in the next phase of the Pacific naval-aerial war as the result of the Midway victory over the Japanese fleet, well informed quarters said today.

It was increasingly indicated that when final reports of damage to the Japanese fleet were assembled, they would show the enemy suffered even more heavily than Chester W. Nimitz reported in his communiques.

Informants said so important was the victory of the United States naval and air forces in a battle which started as a defense of Midway island, it might prove to have been the point of war at which the United Nations took over the offensive in the Pacific at large.

The navy's latest communique said: "There is nothing to report from the central Pacific area."

The first eye-witness story of the Midway battle, the first of many stories of a historic victory which are to come, revealed that the Japanese aircraft carriers sunk were Japan's largest, so far as official listings of enemy naval strength go—the Kaga and its sister ship Akagi.

Ensign George H. Gay, jr., his own plane shot down, saw his comrades attack the two Kaga class carriers and a smaller one, and he saw them burst into flame from direct hits.

The Kaga and the Akagi are 26,900-ton ships with a maximum plane capacity of 60 each.

Japan's remaining carriers, on the basis of admittedly incomplete listings, are much smaller, ranging down from the neighborhood of 14,000 tons, and it was indicated that in this class of ships also, Japan had suffered a disaster.

The crippled enemy fleet had now withdrawn. Forces of both sides were reforming in preparation for the next major clash. It was said here that the next clash might be initiated by the United States, not Japan.

For the moment the situation was that which followed the battle of the Coral sea, but on a much greater scale. The enemy fleet had been repulsed and had been withdrawn. Whether it would or could reform for a new thrust was not known. After the Coral sea, the Japanese did not go back for more and their transport fleet, crowded with invasion forces, was dispersed.

In the Midway battle a much more powerful enemy fleet had suffered much heavier losses, even on the basis of partial reports, against one United States aircraft carrier damaged, one destroyer sunk and a comparatively small number of airplanes lost.

Nimitz, commander in chief of the Pacific fleet, did not bother to issue a communique last night, regarding the battle as over, and permitted the brief navy announcement that all was quiet to tell the story.

It was believed that the Japanese fleet had been pursued up

WORKMAN DIES AFTER FALL OFF BRIDGE ON 30-N

Foreman on Grade Elimination Fatally Injured as Slab of Cement Breaks.

Fatally injured when he accidentally toppled from a bridge on the U. S. Route 30 grade elimination project west of Mansfield, Sam Smith, 41, a foreman on the job, died last night in General hospital.

Smith, whose home was in Cleveland, was brought to the hospital at 6:30 p. m., by fellow workmen. He died at 7:45 p. m. Coroner L. B. McCullough said death resulted from a skull fracture. He did not regain consciousness.

Smith had been employed for a number of years by the Lombardo Construction company of Cleveland which is building an overhead and an underpass at the Erie track on U. S. Route 30-N. He had worked on the project since it was started last year.

Workmen who witnessed the accident told project engineers that Smith was using a pneumatic pavement breaker on the bridge when a large slab of cement apparently broke loose unexpectedly and threw him into the creek bed below. He fell approximately 12 feet into Touby's run. The bridge is near the eastern end of the project.

Smith, father of two children, roomed in Mansfield during the week. He lived at 6900 Plainfield avenue in Cleveland. The body was taken to the G. H. Busch Funeral home in Parma.

Funeral services will be held at 9:30 a. m. Friday in the Our Lady of Good Counsel Catholic church in Parma. Burial will be in the Calvary cemetery, Cleveland.

Surviving are the widow, Mrs. Helen Smith; two sons, James and Billy, at home, and four sisters.

3 MORE FILE

Mitchell, Long, and Wolfe Submit Petitions.

Three more candidates for Richland county offices, all Democrats, filed their nominating petitions this morning with the county board of elections. The filing deadline is 6:30 p. m., Friday.

Petitions were filed today by County Commissioner C. L. Mitchell, seeking re-election; E. P. Long, former sheriff who is a candidate for commissioner, and County Auditor Norman L. Wolfe, a candidate for re-election.

Wolfe had 1,700 signatures on his petition and Mitchell submitted 802 names. County candidates need only 100. The filings brought the total number to seven for county and 17th district offices. Those who filed previously were Congressman J. Harry McGregor and Samuel A. Anderson for congress, John C. Friday for county commissioner, and John L. Catlett for state representative.

SWEET POTATO FUDGE, PLEASE

Confectioners Turn to Farm to Answer Rationing Problems.

NEW YORK—(INS)—The candy market will soon be selling confections made from sweet potatoes and three-day old bread.

News that the candy industry had turned to the farm to offset the government imposed sugar restructions was disclosed today at the 59th annual convention of the National Confectioners association.

An industry spokesman said the manufacturers were experimenting with food products containing natural sugars.

PREDICT DELAY IN RATIONING

Congressmen Say Nationwide Limit on Gasoline Waits Result of Survey.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—Postponement of any nationwide gasoline rationing until a comprehensive survey is made of the country's available scrap rubber was predicted in congresional quarters today.

Senate Democratic Leader Barkley (D-Ky) said he understood such a survey was being contemplanted and other informed legislators added that it was likely President Roosevelt would await the results before deciding whether it was necessary to put all private automobiles on short fuel rations.

Barkley told reporters there were all kinds of estimates on the amount of rubber that could be reclaimed from the scrap pile, ranging from the 10,000,000 ton estimate of one big business executive down to a war production board expert's guess that only 700,000 tons could be obtained.

Meanwhile, Price Administrator Leon Henderson reported to a senate committee it was likely that slightly more than 300,000 tons would be reclaimed in 1942. Henderson informed a special committee investigating the gasoline situation, 6,000,000 tire caps probably could be made from this amount.

At the same time Henderson expressed the opinion no combination of tire conservation measures which did not include nation-wide gasoline rationing could hope to avert "a serious transportation crisis."

"Even if improvement in the scrap situation were to make possible the top-capping of 6,000,000 passenger car tires this year and in future years," he said, "there is no reason to regard the motor transport problem as solved."

JERSEY CITY, N. J.—(AP)—The 18,134-ton passenger liner Gripsholm arrived today from Gotheburg, Sweden, a day late on her mission to exchange Japanese and American diplomats and nationals.

The white-painted Swedish American liner, which has not been seen in this country in several years, carried 193 Swedish and other Scandinavian-Americans.

You Have A Chance To Help Buy 408 Jeeps For U. S. Army

Exactly 400 new cars and trucks were purchased by Richland county residents in June of 1941. Today, a year later, new cars are "out" for all except a limited few persons.

The county can, however, buy 408 cars during this month—the sturdy little light-weight reconnaissance cars of the army which have come to be known universally as Jeeps. This was pointed out today by sponsors of the "Jeep Day" program in Mansfield Friday.

Roger H. Bolin, chairman of the Civic committee arranging for the event, explained that each Jeep, fully equipped, costs approximately $950. The county's June quota of war bonds—$387,600—would buy 408 Jeeps for Uncle Sam's armed forces.

In an appeal for residents to support the June bond-buying program, Bolin said.

"This June quota represents a 33⅓ per cent increase over the Richland county quota in May—a quota which the county was successful in reaching. If we are to meet this new goal, it means that every income-earner in the county will have to put one-tenth of his earnings into war bonds.

"To stimulate bond sales this month, an entire fleet of Jeeps will arrive in the city shortly before noon Friday. The caravan will parade down Park avenue west and will be the feature attraction of a short mass meeting at the square.

"At this meeting, J. G. Baird will act as master of ceremonies,

Trolley Car Leaves Tracks and Crashes Into Building.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—(INS)—Fifteen persons were injured, two critically, when a trolley car leaving the east side tunnel left the rails, careened down a street and smashed into a downtown building.

Police said the seriousness of the accident led to reports that five passengers had been killed but a check of three hospitals showed that the most seriously injured were Eugene Elisbree, 72, and Charles Gardner, 35, both of Providence.

Thirteen others were at Rhode Island hospital.

Bus Transportation Between Cities Put Under U. S. Rule

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The office of defense transportation took war-time control today over all the nation's inter-city bus operations, ordering present routes frozen, competitive service pooled, and all express service discontinued. The order is effective July 1.

After that date, ODT directed, no inter-city buses may be operated "for the primary purpose" of serving golf courses, athletic fields, race tracks, theaters, dancing pavilions, or "other places conducted primarily for the purpose of amusement or entertainment."

An ODT spokesman said this would affect bus service to beaches and other resorts provided the buses were used primarily to take passengers to such places.

In addition, except for one daily round trip, bus companies must discontinue schedules which fail to show an average load in both directions of less than 40 per cent of the seating capacity of the buses used.

Operators are required to keep records of passenger miles and seat miles and report to ODT any round trip schedule which fails to meet the seating capacity requirement.

DEPENDENTS' AID PROMISED BY CONGRESS

House Passes Help Measure as Senate Agrees to $50 Army, Navy Pay.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—Dependents of army and navy men had congressional assurance today their financial needs would be taken care of by Uncle Sam.

House passage late yesterday of legislation embodying the general pay provisions of a bill previously approved by the senate put both branches overwhelmingly on record in favor of the same scale of payments, leaving extraneous provisions to be worked out by a joint conference committee.

At the same time the senate agreed, 58 to 20, to raise the minimum monthly pay of service men to $50, effective as of June 1.

On the dependents' allowance bill, the only disagreement between senate and house was over a senate proviso under which the definition of dependency for draft purposes would have been broadened to include factors other than actual financial dependency, such as the family relationship.

Members of the house military committee told the house the scale of payments purposely was kept moderate to prevent local draft boards from getting the impression they could draft family heads indiscriminately.

The scale calls for a $22 deduction from the service man's pay, to which a federal allowance of $28 would be added for a wife, $12 for the first child and $10 for each additional child.

In all cases involving "Class A" dependents—wife or children, or both—the deductions and allowances are mandatory.

Allotments and allowances for "Class B" dependents, such as parents, brothers and sisters, provide for a $22 deduction from the

The figures, Attlee said, include civilians killed and injured throughout the empire between Sept. 3, 1939, and Sept. 2, 1941.

Takes Action To Avoid Delays In New Registration

School authorities handling the registration for sugar to can and preserve early-season fruits took steps today to avoid the delays which occurred at yesterday's registration for persons whose names start with the letters A or B.

Extra registrars have been added and a new system worked out for handling the crowd today and throughout the balance of the registration. Instead of one line, there will be two lines of applicants at the registration point—John Simpson junior high school.

In addition, points of confusion which ordinarily mark the start of any such activity have been cleared up, and it is expected future registration will flow more swiftly, school officials said.

Six hundred families registered yesterday and received their sugar purchase certificates. Approximately 100 left without registering due to the delay, it was estimated.

Applicants themselves can ex-

'INTRUDERS': RAF Smashes At Docks, Railways And Airfields

BULLETIN

LONDON—(AP)—British and American air force units have arrived in China, Reuters reported today in a dispatch from Chungking.

(By Associated Press)

LONDON—A "strong force" of British bombers dropped explosives over hundreds of square miles of Hitler's domain last night, raiding the great industrial Ruhr, the Dieppe docks, and railways and airdromes in France and Holland.

The RAF lost 18 bombers.

In "intruder" raids over France and Holland—aimed at diverting German defenses from the RAF's main objective—American-made Boston bombers exploded an ammunition dump on the Schipti airdrome and pock-marked the runways with direct hits.

Another pilot derailed a freight train engine and a Hurricane fired cannon shells into six other locomotives. The raids continued the RAF's virtually ceaseless attacks on German rail systems, so vital to Nazi control of western Europe.

The losses were the heaviest reported since the 1,000-bomber raid on the great steel city of Essen last week, but were believed well below the dangerous 10 per cent figure which makes raiding unprofitable.

"Fighter command aircraft on intruder operations attacked airfields and railway objectives in northern France and Holland," the air ministry said.

"An aircraft of the coastal command destroyed an enemy seaplane over the North sea."

The recent average losses of less than 4 per cent on British

GRAVEYARD: Nazi Dead Strew Fields In Sevastopol Battle

(By International News Service)

MOSCOW—The fields before the defenses of Sevastopol today were being turned into graveyards for thousands of German soldiers as Nazi Gen. von Mestein lavishly tossed into battle division after division of his 11th army.

Beyond the death of thousands of his men, he accomplished little or nothing against the staunch Soviet defenders of the vital Crimean port.

The main offensive against the city was taking shape in two sectors where tremendous forces of infantry, artillery, tanks and planes were concentrated.

The battle around Soviet fortified positions in this area lasted into the night and was resumed again the next day. The Nazis finally succeeded in staging a minor break-through but their wedge was cut off by a counter-attack and they were driven off with heavy losses in men and materials.

This is the third offensive against Sevastopol. The Germans lost 10,000 in the first and 35,000 in the second. During the intervening months there have been no attacks, but many divisions have been tied down in the Sevastopol area.

The Nazis now are trying to take the vital base "at any cost," hoping for complete control of the Crimean peninsula. So long as the Soviets hold Sevastopol they control the Black sea and have a thorn in the side of the Nazi flank.

The Germans have concentrated

Chinese Wipe Out Chuhsien Invaders

CHUNGKING —(AP)— An army spokesman said today a Japanese force which penetrated the walled city of Chuhsien in Chekiang province had been wiped out after three days of violent fighting and that the Chinese were again in full possession of the city, but he warned that China's situation in general "remains grave."

He said the Japanese were trying to by-pass the town, chiefly important because of its nearby airfield which is within bomber range of Tokyo, in an effort to trap large Chinese forces by closing a pincers with forces 180 miles to the west in Kiangsi Province.

The Chekiang-Kiangsi operation is the most important Japanese land operation, but he also admitted the invading forces along the Burma road have been reinforced and again are on the west bank of the Salween river after having once been driven back nearly to Lungling, 25 miles from the river.

The spokesman denied that the Japanese had been able to force a crossing of the broad Salween, but acknowledged that Japanese had restored the situation to what it was two weeks ago.

To the west in Kiangsi Province, the spokesman said, the Japanese drive from Nanchang had run into difficulties at Tungsiang, 45 miles southeast in entering Tungsiang but were driven out.

The spokesman, meanwhile, in comment on President Roosevelt's warning to Japan against the use of poison gas said Japanese forces had employed it on more than 800 different occasions in the war in China.

Sees America Base For Giant Air Raids

LONDON —(AP)— Air Chief Marshal A. T. Harris suggested today that 10,000 bombers a night soon might fly over Germany and that many might fly directly from America "with formidable bomb loads."

Speaking in a news reel, the commander in chief of the bomber command declared the present massive raids on Germany were but preliminary warmups for terrific punishment in store for Japan.

"One day in the near future, it might not be impossible to have 10,000 bombers over Germany in one night, including hundreds which could fly direct from America with a formidable bomb load. though of course this is only a surmise," he said

Despite the massive raids on Cologne and Essen in which more than 1,000 bombers were used on each, Harris declared that heavy bombing "hasn't been tried yet."

"Some people argue that heavy bombing will not win wars," he said. "To them I answer that it hasn't been tried yet. When it is, Germany will be the experiment and Japan will be the confirmation."

He likened the RAF raids which laid the northern ports of Leubeck and Rostock in rubble to a "gentle zephyr."

Germans Claim 24 RAF Planes Downed

BERLIN, (From German Broadcasts) —(AP)— The German high command reported today that the British air force lost 24 planes yesterday and last night in raids on western Germany and occupied territories which, it declared, caused civilian casualties and property damage in western Germany.

The Germans said night fighters and anti-aircraft guns brought down 16 bombers during attacks on unspecified section of the western Reich, and German fighters shot down seven British planes on the channel coast and one on the North Sea coast.

The raids on western Germany caused damage primarily to residential quarters and public buildings, the high command said.

U. S. O. SERVICE CLUB URGED FOR MANSFIELD BY CORPORAL

Corporal Carl L Davis Mansfielder, stationed at Camp Claiborne, La thinks it would be a fine thing if the Richland county U S. O. could establish a service club in Mansfield

He is a frequent visitor at the big U S O. club which opened recently in Alexandria, La, and says he always goes there when he is in town, wants to relax, write a couple of letters or "just sit there at ease."

"The Club makes a nice meeting place if you want to meet another fellow," said Davis, home on leave until Saturday. The picture shows and dances are all free and girls from surrounding towns act as hostesses."

"Usually there's open house every Saturday night although the rest of the week the dances are sponsored mostly for one company or regiment at a time."

"There's a library there, a letter-writing room and a lot of things that we fellows away from home enjoy."

Davis also added that the churches in Alexandria each have their own recreation room open to the men in service where games and other pleasurable facilities are provided.

He feels there's no reason why the U. S. O. campaign for $22,000 should not go over the top in Richland county and believes that the $2,000 with which the organization hopes to maintain a canteen should furnish "the boys with considerable pleasure."

Elephant Trainer With Circus

DAY OF STREET PARADE OVER FOR GOOD, CIRCUS MAN ASSERTS

The day of the circus parade is gone, believes C Foster Bell, representative of the Cole Brothers circus which plays at the Fairground Thursday afternoon and evening.

And you can blame the war for it, in part, at least. You can also blame the high cost of living.

Why the war? Well, transportation's a problem these days, and circuses figure that it's better to haul only equipment used in staging the shows than to include a lot of vehicles and costumes that are used only for the parade. That saves train space, or if the same number of cars is used, permits more acts to be included in the show.

As even the layman knows, the circus man's first business when the circus arrives in town is to get the equipment from the railroad yards to the show grounds and then hoist the tents that house the people and animals.

It is a gigantic undertaking each day, and must be accomplished in a few short hours, with the result that often the old-time street parade started late and frequently had to be cancelled altogether.

Last winter, came the opportunity to obtain an unusual number of new foreign acts and displays including Europe's biggest liberty-horse display, the Adolf Delbosq act, now one of Cole Brothers' outstanding 1942 features. The management immediately cabled Delbosq, then in England, to come as they had room on the circus train owing to the elimination of the street parade. Another foreign act is the Six Wallabies, acrobatic stars from Australia, and making their first appearance in this country.

Cole Brothers was the last major show to eliminate the street parade, and Bell believes it is doubtful if it ever will be revived. The traffic problem in many cities is another hindrance, and in addition, the circus grounds nowadays are usually on the outskirts of the city and too far for walking animals to travel.

Reduced-price tickets for children for the afternoon performance will be available at Leed's drug store, 84 North Main street.

Up to show time Thursday afternoon regular 50c children's tickets will be sold at the store for 30c, including all taxes. Parents may purchase these tickets for children.

For the convenience of circus patrons a down-town ticket office will be in operation all day Thursday at the Lautsbaugh Pharmacy, 8 South Main sreet, where both reserve and general admission tickets will be on sale.

1—Bring your war ration book with you

2—Don't take the registrar's time by having to stop and figure—instead be ready with your figures on amount of fruit canned last year, and amount you expect to can this season.

3—Don't come in to register today unless your name starts with the letters C and D; tomorrow's registration is for the E and F classification.

4—Bear in mind this registration is not for your entire year's needs. Instead, it is only for sugar for early season fruits—strawberries, raspberries, blackberries, cherries, early apples, and rhubarb.

Applicants for the most part are helpful and reasonable in their request, registrars said Each registration takes approximately seven minutes. Registration hours are from 1 p. m. to 5 p. m. daily, on the first floor corridor at John Simpson school.

The registration is for residents of Mansfield and all others living in the 10 townships served by the Mansfield rationing board. These are Perry, Worthington, Jefferson, Monroe, Washington, Troy, Sandusky, Springfield, Mifflin and Madison townships.

For the convenience of those living furtherest from Mansfield, one applicant may register for a number of families provided he or she has the war ration books for all, and is prepared to give figures on last year's canning and estimates on this year's canning for all families he is representing.

One pound of sugar is allowed for each four quarts of fruit to be canned.

EGG PRODUCTION QUOTA BOOSTED

KANSAS CITY, Mo—(UP)—The egg production goal for the United States this year is 3,822,417,000 dozen eggs, according to Dewey Termohlen, chief of the poultry buying section of the government's surplus marketing administration.

Last year the county produced about 3,239,915,000 dozen eggs, Termohlen said. Thus the increased production is expected to total about 532,000,000 dozen.

However, this does not mean there will be a surplus, Termohlen said, as the government expects to buy more than 532,000,000 dozen eggs in the form of dried eggs, and additional millions of dozens for the army and navy.

The Surplus Marketing Administration will support the price of eggs during the flush production season this spring at 85 per cent of parity, Termohlen said.

numerous air squadrons from other sectors in an effort to bomb Sevastopol out of existence. They have been coming over without cessation in waves of 30 planes each.

The Russian high command reported today, however, that all defense lines remain intact and that artillery and mortar batteries are steadily replying to the German challenge.

Nazis Claim Advance Near Sevastopol

BERLIN (From German Broadcasts) —(AP)— The German high command reported today that German infantry, supported by "heaviest artillery and strong air force formations," had "stormed several fortifications on an elevation dominating the countryside" near Sevastopol, then repulsed Soviet counter-attacks seeking to regain the positions.

Other German reports said strong Nazi air forces renewed air attacks on Sevastopol, spreading fires along the water front with direct bomb hits.

On the Kharkov front in the Ukraine, the high command declared, minor Soviet thrusts "failed" while on the central and northern sectors encircled Russian groups were "herded together into a small space with effective support of the German air force."

A merchant ship on Lake Ladoga, in the Leningrad sector, was damaged by bomb hits, the Germans reported.

Oasis Defenders Beat Off Axis Attack

CAIRO, Egypt — (AP) — Free French and British Imperial defenders of the tiny oasis of Bir Hacheim, which is fast becoming the new Tobruk of the Libyan campaign, beat off one of the strongest Axis assaults yet unleashed on Allied positions in North Africa in a day-long battle yesterday, the British reported today.

For the sixth straight day the garrison's commander, General Pierre Koenig, an Alsatian who fought at Narvik and in the battle of France, flatly rejected a ceremonial Italian demand for surrender of the post, the inland anchor of Britain's Libyan line 50 miles southwest of Tobruk.

German armored units were rushed from Knightsbridge, 25 miles to the north to join Italian armored forces and Axis infantry in the attack.

The RAF and German dive bombers fought hour after hour as the battle went on but the British Middle East command reported officially today that the attack was repulsed.

and speakers will include Major Charles E. Robinson, leader of the Jeep fleet, Mayor W. J. Locke, and Paul M. Eliot, Richland county bond sale chairman, who will report on sales to date.

"The ceremony will last only 20 minutes, after which the Jeeps will be dispatched to various locations on street corners and at industrial plant exits so that Richland county residents can view them at close range.

"In addition to the soldiers who will drive the jeeps, 23 Mansfield girls in costume, patterned after that of the American Minute Man will act as bond and stamps saleslades. Every person who buys a war bond from one of these Minute Maids will receive a ticket entitling him to a free ride in a Jeep. Bonds can be purchased as outright cash purchases, or war savings stamps can be traded in for bonds.

"I am sure that the June goal of $387,600—or 408 Jeeps—can be reached. When it is considered that 400 new cars were purchased in the county in June of 1941—and in addition there are refrigerators and other items for which money cannot be spent now—it is easy to see how the sale of war bonds can be sharply increased and the goal attained or surpassed."

Eliot joined in the appeal for the county to buy 408 Jeeps in June for the army. The increased quota for the county, he said, make it essential that every earner set up a definite bond-buying program which he will adhere to, week after week and month after month.

"The best way that we can show every man in the army that we're back of them is to buy enough bonds to buy 408 Jeeps," Eliot said.

The four bond sale locations during the day will be in front of the R. E. Moorhead showrooms, in front of the Richland bank, at Third and Main, and at Third and Walnut. The Moorhead location will be used as the starting point for the Jeep rides to be provided residents who buy bonds. Other Jeeps in the caravan will spend the afternoon visiting industrial firms at shift changes.

Bond sale locations in the evening will be in front of the Madison and Ohio theaters Part of the fleet will go to Crestline in the late afternoon to participate in the parade planned there Friday evening.

The Mansfield Senior high school band will play for the ceremony at the square, starting at 11:45 a. m. The Jeep procession is due to arrive a few minutes after 12 noon, and the ceremony will start immediately.

much done this morning. They were unable to get tools to work with. When the city failed to return the shovels and picks they had used Monday they borrowed a shovel, a rake and a brush from the Harrington Air Service.

Elias said he had called City hall for tools, but at noon they had not yet arrived.

Street Superintendent Charles Hebel, under whose supervision the tools were taken to the port yesterday, said he had received no call for equipment today.

Yesterday's work consisted of filling in earth around a catch basin. The job was completed this morning with the brush, rake and shovel.

Elias said he wanted to begin work today on the drainage system. He expects to unearth a section of the drain that is believed to be broken and stopped up.

Replacement tile however, are not on the job. The equipment custodian said he didn't know where they would come from.

Major improvements, including hard surfaced runways at the port have been sought by aviation enthusiasts since the government started its civilian pilot training program in Mansfield nearly three years ago.

With the instruction of fliers more and more a definite need for a nation at war, Harrington has pushed city officials for funds for improvements.

During fall and spring months the port is closed to flying due to the muddy runways. Low spots in the runways and chuch holes have made it dangerous to land fast military aircraft on the field.

Council appropriated $5,000 early this year after Harrington had outlined to it a need for funds for improvements which he said should be completed at once. In the five months that have passed a total of approximately $200 has been spent for minor maintenance work.

dust into their homes," said Wolff, "because buses pass at regular intervals.

The service director said that the buses do most of their travel on hard-surfaced streets but that in traversing Cline avenue and Howard street "they kick up a lot of dust."

Wolff was reluctant at first to disclose the names of streets to be oiled because he said there was a long list of requests from residents of other streets needing treatment.

"It's hard to say which streets are the most important," said Wolff. "But we have a war going on and we'll have to take the oil as it comes. We'll get around to the other streets as soon as we can."

Early last month, the administration practically abandoned hope of getting oil when the Mansfield Asphalt Paving company informed it that none of the seven carloads of oil ordered by the city could be delivered because of wartime use of tank cars.

This announcement came a few weeks after the paving company had informed the city the order would have to be trimmed from seven to five carloads because of restricted use of oil tank cars.

Wolff said he felt certain the city would be able to get additional oil but said it was impossible to estimate how long it would take to get delivery.

BLIMPS COLLIDE OVER ATLANTIC; 12 FEARED DEAD

Coast Guard Recovers Three Bodies; Only One Survivor Listed in Tragedy.

(By Associated Press)

LAKEHURST, N. J. — Coast guards recovered today three bodies and wreckage from one or two navy training blimps lost in what apparently was a mid-air collision over the Atlantic ocean while on an unexplained "experimental mission."

Only one survivor was known. Still missing were nine of the 13 naval and civilian occupants of the G-1 and the smaller L-2 when they set out last night from the naval air station at Lakehurst. The airships plunged into the ocean about four miles off Manasquan, which is 16 miles northeast of Lakehurst.

Sheriff Lewis Menninger of Ocean county reported recovery of the three bodies in the gondola of the L-2, dragged ashore at Point Pleasant beach.

Among the bodies was that of Lt. Cmdr. Clinton S. Rounds of Toms River, senior officer aboard the two craft and a survivor of the dirigible Macon disaster off the California coast in 1935.

All occupants of the blimps were equipped with life-jackets for use should the craft be forced down on the water. They were about 400 feet above the sea when they apparently collided.

Ensign Howard Fahey of Scarsdale, N. Y., was rescued and brought ashore by coast guards early today. He suffered an apparent fracture of an arm in the crash, but swam about until picked up.

A clock in the gondola of the L-2 had stopped at 10:20 p. m.

Those dead or missing were:

Lieutenant Commander Rounds, listed as a pilot; Lieut. Frank A. Totter, Toms River; Ensign C. C. Ross, R. F. D. 1, Jacksonville, Fla.; Ensign K. G. Lee, New London, Conn.; O V. Roos, aviation chief machinist's mate, Lakewood, N. J.,; R. C. Poteet, aviation chief machinist's mate, Langdon, Ky.; W. H. Herndon, jr., boatswain's mate, first class, Lakehurst.

These civilians were aboard: Dr. J. C. Hoover, Middletown, Conn.; L S. Oyer, Minneapolis, Minn.; Vella Tibles, San Diego, Calif.; F. C Gilbert, New London, Dr. A. B. Wyse, San Diego.

THE WAR TODAY

By DE WITT MACKENZIE
(Wide World War Analyst)

The beaten and badly wounded Jap fleet seems to have hidden itself from pursuit in the vastness of the Pacific and to be slinking home from its rash adventure at our Midway base, but we have the satisfaction of knowing that while the enemy hasn't suffered an overwhelming defeat his striking power has been very considerably lessened.

Japan's losses are particularly serious because of her dependence on her navy not only to wage offensive war but to protect her ill-gotten conquests. Her whole future hangs on her control of the western Pacific.

That brings us to another point which has been discussed previously in this column but is worth emphasizing. I believe that since the conquest of Indonesia the Japs have been primarily concerned with protecting and consolidating their gains.

This means that the Japanese operations now, except for the Chinese theater, are largely defensive. The essential reason for the attack on Midway was to secure a strong point which would hamstring our activities in the western Pacific and render our Australian base impotent by cutting the supply lines.

This doesn't mean that the Nipponese are going to sit down and wait for attack. The Russians have demonstrated in an unforgettable manner that offense frequently is the best form of defense, and we may expect the Japs to be on the move.

Further assaults on American possessions may be expected.

BROADWAY

—By Dorothy Kilgallen

Speaking For Myself.

SOMETIMES I think the trouble with a lot of motion pictures is that they end too soon, at a point which is more convenient to the author than satisfying to the audience. I mean, script writers seem to think the suspense is all over once Joe has got Sally in arms and they are kissing for as long a take as the Hays office will permit — but I maintain that this is just the beginning of the excitement.

Kilgallen

Take a recent picture, "Woman of the Year," for example, and tell me why should a mismatched pair like Spencer Tracy and Katharine Hepburn get along any better in the eighth (or missing) reel than they did in the first seven?

Or take "Son of Fury," and try to imagine what happens when the starlight in Tyrone Power's eyes get a little dim and he notices that his little native girl, Gene Tierney, is turning plump, and that her conversation is strictly Tahiti and very dull. What do you do then, scenario writer?

Most Hollywood love stories marry off rich girls to poor boys, professors to chorus girls, ditch-diggers to debutantes. This makes for interesting complications during the courtship, but it bodes ill for future domesticity. That is why I would like to see my movies stretch a little further into the future, showing hero and heroine after five or ten or 15 years of marriage.

I dare the writers to take the plots an inch or so past that inevitable osculation.

I think I would rather hear Lou Holtz tell a funny story than anyone else in the world . . . I hear Dorothy Draper is going to redecorate the Stork club for the fall revelers. How nice . . . It's not their fault of course, but I must say I am annoyed by movie ushers who stand at the head of an aisle bellowing, "Seats on aisle D, to your left, Seats on aisle D, to your left." Maybe they ought to carry neon signs spelling out the messages they feel they have to declaim in ringing tones . . . I think Tin Pan Alley war songs so far have failed to make a hit with the soldiers because they've been strictly sentimental. Soldiers seem to like songs containing comedy, and verse forms that can be improved with variations, as "Mademoiselle From Armentieres" in World War I. In other words, the fighting forces want Tin Pan Alley to write them a song that they can rewrite without too much trouble.

Of all the girls who decorate the night club scene, Julie Haydon is most unique as to costume, coiffure, and behavior. She looks like Alice in Wonderland who fell down the rabbit hole and landed in the Cub room by mistake.

The boys at Ft. Meade have written me a letter accompanied by a tremendous batch of signatures, telling me how much they enjoyed the appearance of a chorus girl named Audrey Griffen, who appeared there recently in a U. S. O. Razzle Dazzle show. They said she was beautiful and had a personality that was hard to beat, and that if they were going to be stranded on any desert islands, in the manner of the Yale and Harvard boys, they would like to be accompanied in their palmy solitude by little Audrey. Considering that the boys at camps are frequently treated to the sight of such headlined raves as Dottie Lamour and Rita Hayworth, of Hollywood, Audrey —who comes from Brooklyn— seems to have scored an unexpected but immense hit.

At least three months have passed without the announcement that a new comedy has been fashioned after the character (sh! sh!) of Clare Boothe. What's the matter? . . . After all the to-do about cuffless trousers, I don't think anyone notices whether a gentleman is wearing the current cuffless pantaloons or the cuffed pre-war model. I tried desperately to get a glimpse of Lucius Beebe's slacks at the Shubert the other evening, to see whether he had capitulated to the new mode, but his tootsies were tucked far under his seat, so I'm still in suspense . . . Always knew elevator operators were funny ad libbers, but my favorite is the one at Radio City who instead of saying "Going Up" cries: "Ascending!" . . . I chuckled at Walter O'Keefe's declaration that he adores Mayor LaGuardia "because no matter what you hear about him—it's partially true."

Man, 28, Charged With First Degree Murder After Family Dispute.

(By United Press)

EAST LIVERPOOL — Police held Richard Moore, 28, on a first degree murder charge today as the result of a domestic argument on an East Liverpool street in which his father-in-law was shot to death and his wife, mother-in-law and brother-in-law wounded.

Oscar Williams, 58, the father-in-law, died of two bullet wounds in the heart when he tried to act as peacemaker in the argument.

Moore's wife, Dorothy, 26, mother of two children, who had been separated from him, was in critical condition from a wound in the right lung. Her mother, Mrs. Edna Williams, 58, was wounded seriously in the abdomen.

Her brother-in-law, Paul Erwin, 26, received a slight wound when a bullet from Moore's .32 caliber pistol grazed his head.

Moore, a potter, was overpowered by bystanders after he fired five shots and had put the gun against his temple in a suicide attempt. However, he had emptied the gun on the others.

The shooting occurred at 5:15 p. m. Monday, after Williams and Erwin, fearing that Moore would carry out threats to kill his wife, met her at a laundry where she was employed.

Erwin said Moore started an argument as the family walked along the street toward Williams' car. Williams told the family to get in the car and Moore fired at Erwin. When the others tried to restrain him, he shot Williams, according to police, then shot the women.

Others held Moore until officers arrived.

School Children Ease Threat To Strawberry Crop

Mobilization of high school pupils as strawberry pickers today eased the threat that a large portion of an extra large strawberry crop in Ashland county would be lost due to a shortage of pickers.

A. D. Hiner, manager of the U. S. Employment Service at Ashland, said that the response to his appeal for 500 pickers to handle the crop had been "splendid" and that it was not believed that there would be any substantial crop loss.

Hiner said that approximately 450 persons, most of them children, ranging from 12 to 16 years old, were working in strawberry patches as the result of the call.

C. W. Handley, manager of the Mansfield Employment service, said that Richland county did not face any similar threat but that there would be a need for "several hundred" workers as soon as harvest time arrived.

Handley said that school children would be asked to help with the harvest and that the government was making plans to send in "harvest caravans" filled with workers from nearby sections if necessary.

'INTERIM' AUTO TIRES HUNTED

Technicians Explore All Types of Material to Keep Cars on Road.

DETROIT—(AP)—There will be an "emergency" or "interim" automobile tire, designed to keep most of America's motorcars in operation until the government-sponsored rubber substitute program bears fruit, if the combined technological resources of the nation's automotive and tire industries can produce it.

A spokesman for both industries, emphasized, however, the solution to the present rubber shortage was not "just around the corner."

The committee, headed by James G. Zeder, chief engineer in charge of laboratories for Chrysler corporation, has been exploring for more than a month all possible sources of relief for the impending tire shortage.

Asked whether Thiokol, the substitute upon which Dow Chemical company has been working, was included among the possibilities, Zeder replied: "All materials are being considered."

The committe's objective, he said, is to "do something quickly" to meet the essential transportation needs.

Thus the present search is mainly for a re-treading substance, designed to rejuvenate tires now on the nation's vehicles.

In the search an almost endless variety of substances has been considered, including linseed oil, asphalt, pitch, oils, glues, casein, soybeans and other materials. The committee has even considered wooden or cushion wheels—and ruled them out as providing no solution.

SCRAP RUBBER APPEAL RENEWED, SCOUTS READY TO COLLECT IT

Mansfield and Richland county residents were again urged today by Floyd F. Dent, Boy Scout executive to search their homes for scrap rubber in any conceivable form and have it in readiness for collection by Boy Scouts this week and next.

The county-wide drive will be similar in organization to the Scout's earlier waste paper campaign. More than 1,000 Johnny Apleseed Area Boy Scouts will make a house-to-house canvass during the next two weeks to gather up the rubber.

"Scrap rubber of any sort is acceptable," Dent said, "including soles and heels from old shoes, worn-out boots, water bottles, hose, tires and tubes."

Each Scout troop has been assigned an area to cover and following the canvass, scrap rubber will be taken to a central collection point to be hauled from there to junk leaders and sold.

Persons who wish to have scrap rubber picked up immediately are asked to phone Scout headquarters and prompt collection will be made, Dent added.

The drive was organized last week following receipt of a telegram from national Scout headquarters stating that the greater need for salvaging of rubebr made it desirable for Scouts to shift their attention from the collection of waste paper which they had been rounding up for several months.

U. S. Attorney Says Dodgers Won't Get Away With It.'

CLEVELAND —(INS)— Draft dodgers had a stern warning today from U. S. Attorney Don Miller that those attempting to evade service in the armed forces "will not get away with it."

Miller said they will be sought out, arrested and prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law. His warning came after Cuyahoga county draft boards announced their calls for the coming six weeks will equal the number of men taken from the county since the beginning of the draft machinery.

He anticipated the draft board's quotas will see a great number of men seeking to evade the draft.

A former resident and city solicitor of Mansfield was conferred an honorary degree yesterday at commencement exercises at Wittenberg college, Springfield. He is Attorney Glenn M. He served as city solicitor here from 1905 to 1909.

Thieves who broke into the Else service station at 423 North Main street last night weren't very choosey about the tires they stole. Police said today that the burglars stole four automobile tires "worn so bad" that no value could be placed on them and a truck tire worth about $20. The burglars gained entry by breaking a window at the rear of the station.

Basements of homes in Perrysville are being flooded mysteriously, and some property owners think the answer is in the higher water level in the Pleasant Hill reservoir about a mile away. It was more than a coincidence, they think, when the water began to flow into basements at the same time the Muskingum Conservancy district raised the water level in the lake. Bryce Browning, secretary of the Conservancy district, said test wells will be drilled to determine whether the higher water level could be forcing underground streams into the basements.

Miss Mary Stevens writes her family and friends here that she was off duty and at home when the explosion which took more than a score of lives rocked the Ellwood, Ill., munitions plant last week. A student at Olivet college, Kankakee, Ill., she took a job at the munitions plant for the summer vacation just a week ago. Although she was 27 miles from the scene, in the home where she lives at Kankakee, she was thrown violently from her bed by the force of the explosion. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Stevens of 442 Hammond avenue.

DROPS LOWER

Ohio Relief Load Under All-Time Low, Reports Indicate.

COLUMBUS — (INS) — Although Ohio's relief case-load hit an all-time low of 38,936 in April, State Welfare Director Charles L. Sherwood indicated today that the number of relief cases during May would show a further decline of approximately 10 per cent under April's figure.

The reports also indicated that May encumbrances probably would total about $1,020,000, a drop of approximately $118,288 under the amount spent for April relief.

CANNED SOUP, ON LIST WITH COFFEE, TEA

Experts Plan Coupon Sales For Many Foods; Needs Being Charted.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — Agriculture department officials predicted today that pork, canned soups and soap will be rationed in the future, along with coffee, tea and cocoa.

While Joseph Weiner, deputy director of the WPB's office of civilian supply, said that rationing of coffee, tea and cocoa is "very likely," agriculture department experts also are planning for coupon distribution of many foods, it was learned. These items include salad oils, pepper and canned fish as well as pork, canned soups and soaps.

Meanwhile, a foods requirement committee, meeting tomorrow for the first time, will determine all military and civilian needs. This committee, headed by Secretary of Agriculture Wickard, will also estimate how all foods shall be produced and allocated in the light of their availability. It too will determine the material and equipment necessary to produce, process, transport and store food.

The war production board will draw up lists of food supplies considered essential for home civilian consumption.

Although there will be a definite change in American food habits, Wickard said there will be no "meatless" of "wheatless" days as experienced in the last war.

There will be no need for "meatless days, Wickard said, because the nation has an abundant supply of beef and poultry. Because pork is shipped to the United Nations in huge quantities, he said, however, the civilians at home will have to substitute other meats of which there is a plentiful supply.

The wheat supply, the agriculture chief said, is ample enough to keep the country supplied in wheat products for two years.

The foods requirement committee will decide which oils shall go into the making of food stuffs and which shall be used in the making of paints.

"Although our food habits will be changed somewhat," Wickard stated, "there is nothing to be alarmed about for our food production is at a record high."

Brenda Receives Million And Half In Cash Today

NEW YORK — (INS) — Mrs. Brenda Frazier Kelly, who once ruled cafe society as the nation's No. 1 glamor girl, received a birthday present today of $1,400,000 in cash and the income for life from a $2,500,000 trust fund.

Brenda, now the wife of John "Shipwreck" Kelly, former all-American football star, reached her twenty-first birthday today.

Under provisions of the will of her paternal grandmother, Mrs. Clara Duff Frazier, who died in Chicago in 1936, she receives $1,000,000 outright. Another $400,000 in unexpended interest also will be paid her today.

The trust funds on which she will draw income for life were set up by her grandmother and her father. Previously the money from these funds had been handled by a trustee but now that Brenda is twenty-one she will receive the income direct.

Cafe society has seen Brenda and Kelly infrequently lately. Since the war Brenda has been active in raising funds for the navy relief and similar organizations.

DENIES APPEAL IN SHILOH CASE

Judge Huston Refuses Writ To Release Woman From Jail.

Common Pleas Judge C. H. Huston today denied Mrs. Alice Gore, 54, of Shiloh a writ of habeas corpus which would have released her from the Richland county jail.

Represented by Attorney C. F. Creedman, Mansfield, Mrs. Gore sought the writ on the grounds she did not receive a fair trial in the court of Mayor Don Hamman of Shiloh, last Friday.

Mrs. Gore was convicted on a charge of disturbing the peace.

Mayor Hamman fined her $75 and costs and suspended $50 of the fine. She was confined to the county jail when she failed to pay the fine.

MANSFIELD, OHIO, TUESDAY, JUNE 9, 1942.

Tea is becoming so scarce that more people are beginning to think they might learn to like it.

Applicants for jobs will do well to note that the demand is for "trained men"—the fellow who can "do anything" usually doesn't.

Members of a Columbus wedding party were arrested for needless horn-blowing—which will probably encourage optimists in their belief that the world is getting better.

Army To Direct Blackout Procedure

POINTS raised in behalf of several Mansfield industries, in the matter of application of test blackout regulations, will undoubtedly be given full consideration by local officials as well as by the army authority under which such experimental blackouts are carried out.

The blackout ordinance, as passed by Mansfield city council last week, follows a standard form and provides that "Practice blackouts and air raid drills may be carried out at such times and for such periods as the mayor shall, in his discretion, deem appropriate or necessary, BUT SUBJECT ALWAYS TO THE ORDERS AND DIRECTIONS OF THE ARMY OR NAVY and the orders, rules and regulations authorized herein."

Insofar as national application is concerned, the war department has ruled that manufacturing plants must comply with blackout instructions issued by defense commands in which they are situated, "even though this means a temporary cessation of production."

It is specified, however, that certain munitions plants, or portions of such plants may be permitted to continue production during blackouts, but that these must provide for covering all light openings.

While Mansfield is fairly considered as located in an "uncritical" area this would not excuse failure to take reasonable precautionary steps in advance of possible emergency, and public education in blackout methods is officially set forth as necessary.

The case for the industries, with explanation of difficulties, has been well presented, and will doubtless be given full and fair consideration by authorities upon whom responsibility rests.

Government Buying Spurs Inflation

ECONOMISTS almost universally agree that inflation is caused when purchasing power goes up at a time when the supply of goods available for public consumption goes down. Judged by this rule, the federal government itself is one of the most inflationary influences in the nation. The billions the government spends for non-war purposes helps to create an artificially inflated purchasing power which competes for a restricted and dwindling supply of goods.

That is one of the most compelling reasons for maximum retrenchment in federal non-war spending. Business and individuals must tighten their belts in order to pay for war and prevent inflation. The government, which is the greatest spender of all, must do likewise. The house recently took a step in the right direction when it drastically pruned six major appropriation bills. That policy must be continued and intensified if disastrous economic consequences are to be avoided.

When the Circus Comes To Town

NOT EVERYTHING is changed as a result of the war. Mansfield is to have its "circus day," as usual—and Thursday will be it.

There's something about a circus that gives it a unique place in the field of entertainment—something that attracts people again and again, no matter how many circuses they have seen.

There's the "first circus," of course, memory of which surpasses all others, but also to be remembered are the varied impressions of the successive ages of childhood and youth, when interest veered from one to another of the features and when the glamour of circus life made inescapable appeal.

Next big occasion is when young son or daughter reaches the circus-going age and can be made the excuse for continued attendance—to gaze wide-eyed at the strange animals in the menagerie, to laugh gleefully at antics of the clowns and to view with amazement the fast moving action in the rings and through the air.

You sometimes hear a person say that he "feels sorry" for someone else who has missed seeing or doing something. One of the occasions when "feeling sorry" is justified is for the child who has never seen a circus—and for the adult who doesn't find relaxation and enjoyment by attending a circus, no matter how many he has seen before.

Becoming Better Acquainted

THE OLD and foolish superior attitude of some "city people" toward "country people" has nearly vanished. It started fading when the automobile brought farm and town together and, after a little shaking down on both sides, made it evident that they were about the same kind of people.

Bonds strengthened as city children increasingly spent their summer vacations on farms, fascinated by the freedom and wonder of such life. There they not only played, but learned lessons as valuable as those taught in school. Meanwhile farm boys and girls were getting better acquainted with town life. By this time the old barriers and prejudices are largely gone.

But city and country should mingle still more, for their mutual benefit. Opportunity comes now, with the plans for sending thousands of boys, and also girls, from town to country to help with the farm work, where sons and "hands" have gone to the army. There they will live a life more real, perhaps, than they have ever known.

Nazis Frown on Detective Stories

SINCE 1935 the Nazis have banned detective stories. It is easy to see why. The lesson, above all others, that is taught by detective stories (an argument for considering them the most moral of all books) is that crime does not pay. No matter how carefully the criminal covers up his misdeeds, or how highly entrenched he is in business or society, his crime is brought home to him and he receives the punishment that is due.

No wonder the Nazis do not want the Germans doing that kind of reading.

Tax Problems Disturb Congress

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

CONGRESS is on the pan because it's enacting the laws that make life so expensive. The government's executives simply enforce what congress decrees. The executives' excuse is that they're only obeying orders from overhead.

They say they disapprove some of 'em. But they've got no option. They're complying with congressional orders.

However, the executives tell what they want.

If they don't get it, and the war goes wrong, they blame congress.

Taxes—for instance.

An income levy's about as oppressive as anything, from the average man's standpoint.

Suppose a man's getting a salary between $3,000 and $4,000 annually. He's married and his income tax rate, hitherto, has been between $138 and $249, a substantial wad. The proposal's to boost him to from $308 to $594.

Who wouldn't holler at having about 25 per cent taxed out of his yearly pay?

Congress Did It.

Oh, yes, it's an emergency, but isn't he liable to think he's disproportionately stung?

If so, congress did it.

You see it in every newspaper column. Representative government is on trial.

Congressmen are scared. They're the representatorial end. Next November's elections will give 'em a test.

It'll be a contest between the executive and legislative ends.

It isn't so much Franklin D. Roosevelt who'll be the executive leader. The executive crowd are his official subordinates.

Who is an outstanding executive, independently of the White House?

Well, say Leon Henderson.

Ever have any contacts with Leon?

Well, I did when the N. R. A. was in its incipiency.

Leon's proposition is that the hoi polloi doesn't know what's good for it. He means awful well by it, but he doesn't think it has a lick of sense, and wants to do its dictating, for its own benefit.

A New Brand

This world's got a new government brand.

There's the new totalitarian kind—Henderson's.

Now it's a world government that these birds are shooting at.

What they want is to put their proposition across in November. These critters think that government's a function of a few folk like themselves—Leon and associates.

It's going to be international—economic as well as political.

The idea's to run it by a few folk, like themselves.

If you want to understand 'em, you've got to reckon with their philosophy—new worldwide stuff, that may "take" here—not European totalitarianism.

The whole idea is—

Let's stay democratic.

The question is, is this a national, representative government or is it something run by a few men like Leon Henderson and associates?

Brinkerhoff school ranked highest in grade school spelling contest with West Fifth street school a close second.

Dr. George C. Smith moved from 96 Marion avenue to 105 West Fourth street.

J. P. Snapp and Elmer Post went to Columbus to attend United Commercial Travelers convention.

Dr. Charles Baer sold suburban home on Ashland road to Leonard L. Parry.

Miss Sarah Marvin retired after forty-two years as a teacher in Mansfield schools.

TODAY IN HISTORY

June 9, 1791, was the birthdate of John Howard Payne, actor, playwright and author of the immortal song, "Home, Sweet Home." Payne, although wellborn, followed the life of an outcast and wanderer thoughout his tragic career. Even while in foreign lands he is said to have listened to the air of his own tunes while he, the author, groped about penniless. He died at Tunis in 1852.

Listen World!

Why Must We Hate?

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

HOW do you feel about the Japs? Or the Nazis? Do you boil when their names are mentioned, get all scorched around the collar?

Or do you simply despise the things for which they stand and realize that most of them are victims of a system over which they have no more control than you or I?

Those questions are causing a lot of lively discussions in American homes and forums lately. For, now that we are beginnnig to realize that this war is real and not just a Walt Disney fantasy, some of us are working up a considerable lather over it. Writer-director Arch Obeler, famous Hollywood scriptster, is all for mass rabies.

"Anger," says he, "is what people want, and they want hate, the hate of a determined people who are going to kill....The public says, 'Make us angry. We like it!'"

Arch knows his public. Rabblerousing is the easiest and quickest circulation getter. Of course people like anger just as they'd probably like marihuana or bathtub gin, if they were made easily available. There's nothing new about that, but does it necessarily follow that we need hate to win this war? I doubt it. Get mad, yes. Sock 'em plenty, but fill yourself, your private life and thoughts, with the venom of hate? I don't think it pays.

The other day a little yellow man went out of my home. For eight years he had served as helper and friend, standing by through sickness, trouble and tragedy. Everyone who knew him loved him; everyone who touched his life respected his dignity and loyalty, his gentleness and generosity.

But the little yellow man was Japanese. He had lived in this country since childhood and raised his family here. He loves democracy with a fierce pride although he cannot become a citizen. For he has seen what the other forms of government mean.

And so today, the little Japanese, Herbert Sato, is in an assembly center. It is wise that this should be, and he knows it. He has bowed his head to it and gone without protest. He is an "enemy alien."

BUT should I hate Herbert Sato, who never failed me in my need, who so often strengthened me in hours of weakness, whose service was beyond all price? I look around my silent house. There is not a corner he has not touched with his friendly hands. There are the vases he took such delight in filling with blossoms. There are the pots and pans he guarded so zealously, the platters he filled with such wonderful food for those I love.

SHOULD I HATE HERBERT SATO?

NO! I CAN AND DO HATE WHAT THE JAPANESE DID AT BATAAN ND CORREGIDOR. BUT I CANNOT AND I WILL NOT, WITH GOD'S HELP, HATE THE INDIVIDUAL MAN WHO IS CAUGHT UP IN THIS NIGHTMARE OF WAR AND HAS NO CHOICE AS TO HIS ACTS.

Oh, I know, I won't be wise or kind enough to live up to this policy always. I never do practice what I preach, though I wish I might. Some of it's swell stuff. And so I'll probably blow my lid and contribute my share of poison to the general mess. But deep in my heart I do not believe that poison pays. I think that Father Flanagan of Boys' Town summed it all up when he said:

"We must not permit ourselves to be smeared with the same moral filth we are criticizing in our enemies."

For hate is hate, regardless of the color of skin which covers it, and hate breeds hate, regardless of nationality. We will never be free of war until we can rid ourselves of hate.

Navy Moves to Oust Incompetents, 'Quickies' Must Toe Line Or Quit

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON — Admiral Ernest King's order slashing red tape 50 per cent is not the only tightening up that has been instituted in the navy.

Another move not announced is aimed at check-reining the free-handed dishing out of reserve commissions to socialites and sons of the wealthy, which has aroused widespread criticism against the navy.

Under a new regulation, these fledgling reserve officers are put on probation and if they don't measure up, their commissions will be summarily revoked.

Navy insiders believe the new system will have a potent effect both in curbing and ladling out of commissions and in weeding out any incompetents.

Unplugged Hole.

WHILE moving to plug up this hole, navy brasshats, however, still have done nothing about another one.

This is the navy's favoritism-ridden promotion system, under which regular officers with outstanding records and in the prime of life are "passed over" and slated for retirement.

Recently, this column disclosed how under this system three officers who have won high U. S. military decorations for heroism at Pearl Harbor and in the Battle of Java had been previously "passed over" by brasshat promotion boards.

We can now reveal that there were two others similarly axed—Lt. Comdr. Samuel Fuqua, awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor "for outstanding heroism and utter disregard of his own safety above and beyond the call of duty," and Lt. Comdr. Solomon Isquith, awarded the navy cross for "extraordinary courage and disregard of his own safety" while directing the abandonment of the U. S. S. Utah when it was capsizing.

Both of these outstanding officers, with from 13 to 16 years distinguished service in the navy, had been "passed over" by promotion boards and earmarked for ouster.

Do-As-Done-By-Dept.

LIT BROTHERS, giant Philadelphia department store, has struck a new high in pushing the sales of war bonds and savings stamps.

George Johnson, president of the huge establishment, has turned over his entire force of 1100 sales people for selling war securities as a "Number 1 must." Every counter in the store, from the basement to the top floor, has a stock of bonds and stamps and every customer hears a sales talk on buying some.

In preparation for this drive, the sales force took courses on war bond selling from U. S. treasury instructors.

Tydings Economy.

SENATOR MILLARD TYDINGS is chairman of a special senate committee whose purpose, he says, is to promote economy in the federal government. To date, the Roosevelt-hating Maryland Democrat has chalked up a very peculiar record in this pursuit.

Last week Tydings issued a report charging that news releases issued by government agencies are "one of the most wasteful activities of the federal bureaucracy." As evidence he showed that handouts issued on one day weighed 16½ pounds.

To experienced Washington observers there were two puzzling features about Tydings' report.

One was that his charges were extremely old news. It needed no senate investigation to reveal that thousands of dollars are wasted in government press releases. It's a story that has been harped on for years; also one about which congress, with power to end the waste, has done nothing.

The other puzzle was where the economy was in Tydings' loudly ballyhooed economizing.

To prepare his report, Tydings sent out large stacks of questionnaires to the government agencies. One department alone received 8 pounds of questionnaires. To reply to these questionnaires required 19 pounds of paper and an expenditure for clerical work of $8,196 in public funds. This was for one department alone—a relatively minor one.

Conservatively, it is safe to estimate that Tydings' report cost taxpayers not less than $150,000 — for information that has been known for years and which could have been confirmed in detail by making a few telephone calls to any of several scores of Washington news bureaus.

But, of course, that wouldn't have been the political way to economize. And politics is all-important to the politics-as-usual boys on Capitol Hill.

Lindbergh and Raids.

IT WAS largely overlooked in all the excitement, but the 1000-bomber RAF raids on Cologne and the Ruhr marked an anniversary for Charles A. Lindbergh that should not be forgotten.

Exactly one year ago, the young Nazi-decorated oracle of the America First committee, solemnly proclaimed at an America-First rally in Hollywood Bowl:

"The area, the terrains and the climatic conditions of Great Britain are not advantageous for flying. No matter how many fighting planes we build in America and send England, it is not possible to base enough squadrons in the British Isles to equal in striking power the squadrons that Germany can base on the continent of Europe.

"Suppose we had an air force that we could send to Europe. Where could it operate? Some of our squadrons might be based in the British Isles; but it is physically impossible to base enough aircraft in the British Isles alone to equal in strength the aircraft that can be based on the continent of Europe."

Note—The Michigan Daily, published by students of the University of Michigan, reports that when Lindbergh walked through the giant Willow Run bomber plant, he was booed by the workers, who later sent petitions to Ford urging Lindbergh's dismissal.

Defense.

AT A RECENT civilian defense meeting in Evanston, Ill., a timid old lady came up to Thomas L. Shackford, who serves as a block warden, and said, "Are you a blockhead, too?" . . . After he had gained composure, Shackford replied, "No, m'am, the man you want is Charles Miskelly." . . . In Batavia, N. Y., a group of blind persons have been training themselves to act as guides in blackouts. . . . The White House flag now flies all the time. No more lowering the flag in the president's absence, for that would disclose his movements.

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—I used to think I was pretty good at estimating people . . . I used to think I could size up a man at a glance . . . Now, I'm not so sure.

There was a guy named Jerry . . . He was sort of fat, and slow . . . He had a bulldog chin . . . He wasn't very tall, and he had lost a lot of his hair . . . I used to see him around Broadway, looking low and dispirited . . . He got a job as a press-agent's assistant, and did a little leg work. He also answered the telephones. This guy Jerry was always soft-spoken and obliging . . . He would gladly run an errand for anybody. He never said much, and never did he lift his voice, or express an opinion.

So I put Jerry down as an amiable lightweight who was so busy doing favors for other people that he never had time to weep for his own private griefs. Just a good guy, with nothing on the ball. You know the type. You see them everywhere you go.

THEN it happened. Somebody told me that Jerry had gone into the Army. As a captain of engineers . . . That he had been assigned to duty on an important engineering project, outside of the country.

I was taken aback. "How in the world did that guy get a commission?" I asked. The man who told me about Jerry snapped me up rather tartly at this. "Why shouldn't he?" he asked. "If he could satisfy the United States government that he is qualified, why can't that satisfy you?"

I thought that over for a minute. "But Jerry, he's only . . ."

"I know what you're going to say a stooge, an errand boy. Well, you're wrong."

And then he told me all about Jerry.

This Jerry, this amiable, pleasant "lightweight" was a college graduate. A graduate engineer. Not only did he win a degree from one of the toughest engineering colleges in the country, he was a Phi Beta Kappa. He went into business for himself, as a construction engineer. He built up that business. His income reached the $25,000 a year mark. He was sailing along. A Success. That sort of easy sailing was too good to last. There seems always a little joker in the cards that means the game.

HE LOST his wife. The blow staggered him. His health failed him. He went into a decline, and almost died. One day he threw up his business . . . I think he wanted to throw up the sponge too . . . It looked like curtains for Jerry . . . But just then one of his friends whom he had known in the old barefoot public school days ran into him . . . This man saw what was wrong . . . He "adopted" Jerry . . . Gave him little unnecessary chores to do, as a sop to his pride. . . . He encouraged him . . . He built him up . . . When the Japs struck, when he went to war with the Germans and the Italians and the rest of the mob, this friend cornered Jerry one night and said, "Start getting yourself in trim. There's Asia. There's Australia. This country needs engineers. You're elected."

He made Jerry place his application. And take his physical, which was okay. Then the army began to quiz him. The army doesn't fool around when it wants men who can do, things. They made Jerry face a barrage of interviews. They made him take examinations . . . And Jerry ate 'em up.

So one day he got a telegram from the war department, and that was that. I shook hands with him when he left. I didn't have the courage to tell him how badly I had underestimated him.

But I imagine he knew.

A Farmer's Diary

Seasonal Progress

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

WE ARE "knee deep in June." The old swimming hole becomes more welcome with each passing day's sweat and toil beneath the sun. Early June rains and warm sunshine have pushed crops along with more than usual growth for this time of year.

Wheat has attained prodigious height in lowlands, and even on some cultivated hills. Half the height of straw is yellow above the ground, and the top is grayish green with yellowish hints and beginning of harvest odors. Oats has kept almost free from rust, and stands knee high. One early field showed expanding tips where heads were forming. This crop will be harvested in mid-July or early August. A good crop of wheat is 30 to 35 bushels per acre, hereabouts. Of oats, perhaps as high as 60 to 70 bu. per acre.

Corn, in my neighbors' fields, is more than a foot high—a fine, vigorous stand. Mine was planted later, but looks very thrifty. Crows and blackbirds wreaked havoc on some spots, but I did not protest, for they are not human enough to get more than they need for one day. Perhaps, besides the corn, they may have eaten many cut worms and white grubs.

First cuttings of alfalfa are ready. One farmer, north of the city, has harvested more than two tons per acre. Soy beans have long ago losts their seed leaves. The surface of the fields is a soft, dark green. With beans at present price of $2.50 per bu., it promises to be the farmers' best cash crop. For the last six years it has figured in farmers' regular rotation.

Potato fields, in bottom lands, were under water once this season. They have survived the ordeal and early ones will soon be blooming. Between the narrow rows, tall outer stems are nearly touching.

Alsike is white with bloom and sends its pungent fragrance on the wind. Red clover will soon flaunt its deep pink spikes.

Apple and peach orchards are not heavily laden but green fruit is much larger than it was last year. Natural thinning of fruit has resulted in less competition and better sized specimens. Wild berries are prolific looking.

All in all, the farmer's outlook is promising. The prices for his crops, even with government ceilings, are most encouraging. I am glad I'm a farmer, and among living things—plants and animals whose growth and development is a joy to look upon.

Softly Tailored Print Frocks Tops

By SUSAN BARDEN
(International Illustrated News Writer)

For all-around utility there's nothing like the smart, pretty, softly tailored print dresses now being turned out by American designers for dawn to dark wear. Styled for adaptability, these charming frocks are the mainstay of the busy woman's wardrobe, for they look appropriately brisk and fresh at 9 o'clock in the morning, go comfortably through a full day's schedule, and still look right for don't-dress dinner wear and a movie afterwards.

In tune with these energetic times, the keynote of this year's styles is an absence of gingerbread decoration and frou-frou. Femininity is stressed in soft tailoring and dainty detail, but accent is placed on fabric and cut rather than trimming. Beautifully patterned fabrics are made on simple, fashion-right lines, with the result that a trim, efficient effect combines with grace and smartness.

The loveliness of the print patternings in the season's many fine rayon materials has made possible this ideal combination of simplicity and flattery. Firm, fine quality rayon sheers, and smooth soft draping acetate rayon crepes appear in a myriad of delightful and original new print designs, ranging from tiny geometric figures to bold allover or spaced floral patterns.

Great Variety of Styling.

The great variety of styling in this year's dresses offers a wide choice for women of every type. Pert young things and dignified matrons share a continued affection for the printed shirtwaist frock.

The three prints shown in the above photographs are all very smart and beautiful examples of these attractive frocks.

The shirtwaist model (right) combines trim simplicity with a graceful softness of cut. It is made of fine rayon sheer with a turned back V neck, smooth falling unpressed pleats in the skirt, and a softly tied self fabric sash.

The charming daytime and afternoon dress (left) is distinguished by exquisite detail. It combines fine rayon crepe in a striking print with redingote panel and shoulder yoke of snowy white. The print meets the plain material in a stunning cut-out applique design, and tiny pearl buttons mark the smooth front closing.

The third dress (center) is a smooth rayon printed in an attractive flower and leaf motif. It is a slenderly molded daytime model with a flattering V neck and softly tied short sleeves. An unusual shaded effect through the waistline is achieved by the use of a set-in yoke of white as background for intriguing cut-out print applique.

Harmonizers Club Presents Annual Spring Concert

The Mansfield Harmonizers held their spring concert Saturday at the Sons of Herman hall. Ferdinand Swaner directed the opening selection, "America the Beautiful." The harmonizers then sang "The Last Rose of Summer."

George Knackstedt, boy soprano, gave as his vocal numbers, "Madelene," "White Cliffs of Dover," and "God Bless America," for his encore. The Mansfield Leiderkranz then sang in German under the direction of Frank Gfrer, "The Glow Worm" and "Brother of the Freedom." "Not 'Til It's All Over" was the title of Joe Schmidt's solo. He was joined by Mrs. Sophie Gregory for the duet, "Sweet Pictures From Vienna."

The Harmonizers men's chorus sang, "Serenade" and the women's chorus rendered "One Fleeting Hour." The chorus gave their finale by joining in the singing of "Tales of the Vienna Woods." Ending the musical portion of the program were the selections of Gene Gump and Miss Helen Sampson, his accordion accompanist. They gave "Dinah," "Don't Sit Under the Apple Tree," and "If You Knew Susie Like I Know Susie."

Al Stirtzinger was the master of ceremonies. Mrs. Minnie Stirtzinger and Mrs. Elizabeth Dexrell were the piano accompanists. Music for the dancing was furnished by Ed Skulski.

Shower Honors Jane Stough

Mrs. Ada Imler and Miss Mary Holmes entertained at the latter's home, 462½ Bowman street, last evening in honor of Miss Jane Stough, bride-elect of Nicholas J. Marion. Prizes in bridge were won by Miss Ruby Boyer and Miss Marjorie Mitchell who presented their awards to the honoree.

A large white heart trimmed in red contained the shower of miscellaneous gifts. On the gold arrow which pierced the heart were pictures of the bride-to-be and her fiance in heart-shaped frames. A poem told Miss Stough where to find her gifts. The honoree also received an electrical gift from the hostesses. When luncheon was served the large heart served as centerpiece for the table.

Next in the series of parties honoring Miss Stough will be a dinner Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. John Calhoun, East Third street.

Pitfalls of Love

(A sequel to Marriage Meddlers)
By ADELE GARRISON

Jack gave me no chance to answer his tender assurance of gratitude to me. He stooped, kissed me quickly on the forehead, murmuring "God bless you and keep you," then stroke swiftly to the outer door which my father had locked.

Only with an effort I kept myself from rushing after him and hysterically demanding a promise that he would not disappear again. There was something so solemn in the kiss he had given me that I was frightened. It had seemed like the kiss a man would give if he never expected to see again the person to whom he was saying farewell.

But I knew that any protest from me not only would be useless, as far as shaking Jack's determination was concerned, but would cause him great distress, of which he had had far more than his share already. So I made no sound or movement as I heard the sound of unlocking the connecting door, followed by my father's voice saying in low tones, "Go on through, Jack, and wait for me. I won't be a minute."

Urges Madge to Rest.

Then I heard my father coming toward me, and composed my agitated face to meet what I knew would be a searching and appraising gaze.

But he delivered no verdict on my calmness, or lack of it. Instead he spoke briskly, and the suggestion he made was a mandate.

"There's a comfortable couch over there. Better stretch out on it and relax. Take a nap if you can. I shall be busy for the better part of an hour, then I shall want to talk to you."

"Dicky? Mary?" I asked, uncertainly.

"I have checked up on possible trains for Richard," he said. "There is no chance of his getting in before midnight, and Mary won't be much ahead of him. We shall be back at the hotel long before either of them arrives."

I choked back the revelation that we could not go back to the hotel because of what I had learned of a "listening post" in the Lansfield, whose identity I strongly suspected. That I meant to tell him as soon as I should have a good opportunity.

"Then," I said lightly, "a nap seems to be indicated for me."

He smiled at me in evident relief.

"Do try to sleep," he said, then went hurriedly upon the word, locking the door behind him.

I knew the room I was in, as well as the house, was thoroughly guarded, and, with a feeling of safety folding about me like a warm blanket, I slipped off my shoes, stretched out on the couch and pulled a light knitted wool afghan over me.

If anyone had told me I could sleep, I would have hooted incredulously, but my head had scarcely touched the pillow before I was sound asleep.

I did not hear him unlock the door or cross the room, but when I came back to wakefulness I heard my father's voice just above me, saying over and over in a monotonous voice, "Margaret! Wake up, dear!"

Plans to Tell Spencer.

He evidently was determined not to startle me, and as I opened my eyes, I smiled at him.

"I've had the most marvelous nap," I told him, "and I didn't think I'd be able to sleep a wink."

"You look infinitely better," he said, "and I am greatly relieved. You were positively gray with fatigue when you came in. Do you feel equal to talking now, or—when did you eat?"

"We had some sandwiches on the way down," I told him, "and presently I think Jack and Professor Diswell ought to have dinner. I'll be ready for food, also. But first I must tell you, without any delay, why I telephoned Dr. Twitchell and asked him to have you and Ronald leave the hotel."

FOURTH DISTRICT PICNIC.

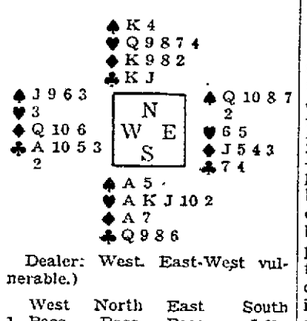
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

LEAVE NO DOUBT

Once you have failed to open the bidding, it may require great care to inform your partner that your hand is of appreciable strength, virtually good enough for an opening. Unless you have played with him before and know just how he will interpret certain calls by you, you should endeavor to select one which will eliminate any possibility of doubt. Otherwise the side may fail to reach a makable game or slam.



Dealer: West. East-West vulnerable.)

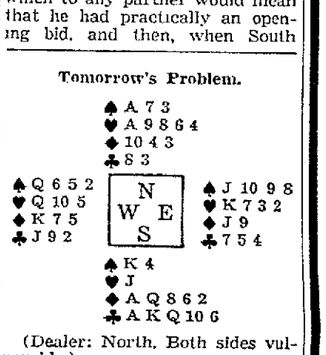
West	North	East	South
1. Pass	Pass	Pass	1 ♥
Pass	3 ♥	Pass	4 ♥
2. Pass	Pass	Pass	1 ♥
Dbl	3 ♥	Pass	4 ♥

The bidding given above covers the sad story of two North-South pairs which failed to reach the slam bid on this deal. In each case, the fault was North's.

Where West passed South's 1-Heart, North was a player to whom a double jump of 3-Hearts meant a guarantee of game strength opposite a minimum in spite of the fact that he had passed originally. South could not see it that way and so with his extra strength bid a mere game. At that table, North could have made the slam simple by bidding 2-No Trumps on his first turn, which to any partner would mean that he had practically an opening bid, and then, when South rebid at 3-Hearts, and North showed a fit at 4-Hearts, South could have bid the slam without benefit of conventions.

At the table where West made his double for defensive purposes, North should not have jumped to 3-Hearts, but should have re-doubled on his first turn, and the slam would have been easy to reach after that.

Tomorrow's Problem.



(Dealer: North. Both sides vulnerable.)

With natural bidding of this deal by North and South, plus use of the Blackwood convention, producing a contract of 6-No Trumps by North, what opening lead should East prefer and why?

HOROSCOPE

For Wednesday, June 10, 1942

THE EMPHASIS may be placed on purely private, social, domestic, cultural and sentimental activities on this day, judging by the lunar transits in influence. All pertaining to private life may be benignly stimulated, promising much pleasure, gratification and sociability. Also there should be success and profit in all phases of business that concern the more personal life, such as drama, entertainment, art and more practical aspects of domestic or social interest. It might be well to be on guard against petty deceits, intrigues or irregularities.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a year in which the intimate affairs of private life dominate the activities. In social, cultural, domestic and affectional associations there might be much satisfaction, with pleasure and excitement, parties, engagements or marriages. All business enterprises concerning these may move into high grooves and prove lucrative as well as pleasant and sociable. It would be well to sidestep trivial deception, or intrigues [illegible].

A child born on this day should be gifted with many social and cultural abilities, and be refined, sensitive and magnetic. It might make brilliant success in any of the fine arts.

RAINBOW GIRLS.

Rainbow Girls will have a Pa-Ma-and-Me picnic downstairs in the North Lake park pavilion at 6 o'clock Wednesday evening.

Add to your list of former Mansfield Braves in the armed forces the name of Bill Salem, speedy centerfielder of last year's Ohio State league club.

Bill's career with Batavia, N. Y., in the Pony league, was just about as short as his stay with Charleston in the Mid-Atlantic this spring.

Last Friday the box score of the Tiffin-Camp Perry game carried this line in the soldiers' lineup: Salem, cf. Yes, it was Mansfield's Bill Salem.

And managing and pitching for the Perrys was Chuck Cronin, pilot of last year's Fostoria club. Score: Tiffin 4, Camp Perry 3.

I wouldn't know whether Bill is in officers' training at Perry, or is one of a recent batch of selectees from Cleveland.

The original Camp Perry is now being used for officers' training, but something new has been added, and the new section of the camp is an induction center for selectees from the Cleveland-Toledo area.

But I do know that he is the fifth member of last year's Braves to don the uniform of Uncle Sam. The others are Harry Siegbert, Bobby TeStruth Jim Coleman, and Tim Mangan.

This is a logical step, perhaps, From needling umpires to shooting Japs.

A prophet is not without honor, save in his home town, and neither, it seems, is a champion.

Well, yes, the Provident girls, twice state softball champions of Ohio, draw fairly well in their home town of Mansfield, but nothing like the crowds they play to when they hit the road. That word "Champion" has its drawing power when they get away from home.

"Doc" Daugherty, manager of the Providents, tells me 5,000 tickets had been sold for their rained-out game at Springfield last Sunday, and the stands at Springfield's Mid-Atlantic league ball park were well on their way to being packed when the deluge dropped.

Starting next week-end, the Providents will be a busy bunch o' babes. (Excuse it, gals, I must have my alliteration.)

On Friday they go to Chicago where they are booked for games on Saturday and Sunday. Returning Monday, they'll get no rest for they are booked at Ashland Tuesday evening, and at Columbus Wednesday, meeting the J. & K. Shoes in the first game of a double bill in which the Ferguson State Auditors tangle with the national champions from Indiana.

And on the following Sunday they play Springfield in a double header here.

Life is just a dizzy whirl
For these champeen softball girls.

For their Chicago trip, the Providents will strengthen their lineup by the addition of the Pitts gals, Dorothy and Betty, from North Ridgeville, who have played with the Mansfield team on previous occasions. Nothin' like Pittin' their best foot forward when they invade the big town.

Others making the trip include: Schuster, Holda, Tipul, Bessemer, Jocha, Peters, Schaeffer, Herrick, Knapp, Iceman, Myers, and Whiteman.

Free Shooting Lessons Planned

Mansfield Gun club has been named by the National Sports board to conduct a program of free training in trapshooting in this vicinity, with Hollis F. Pace appointed as promotion manager for the shooting program.

* * *

Free instruction will be given each Thursday at 6 p. m. at the club's range three miles west of Mansfield off the Park avenue west road, Pace announced today.

* * *

Other gun clubs in this area and program managers appointed are: Bucyrus, S. E. Auck; Shelby, Henry Weber; Galion, C. A. Burris; Lexington, E. Jay Edwards, and Willard, E. V. Meyer.

Redlegs Cut Loose On Braves

Take Six Games in Four Days From Stengel Clan.

By JUDSON BAILEY
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

HOUDINI at his best could not have turned the tables on the Boston Braves as swiftly and completely as the Cincinnati Reds performed the trick this last week-end.

* * *

Before Friday the Reds were floundering futilely in the second division of the National league and the Braves, who had been a bold second for quite a spell, still were holding determinedly to third place.

* * *

Then Casey Stengel led his band into an ambush as Cincinnati and in four days the Reds beat the Braves six times—lifting Cincinnati to third and dropping Boston to fifth.

The Reds completed their sweep yesterday with a 3-1 triumph on the three-hit hurling of big Paul Derringer.

For eight innings the right-hander had a no-hit game and the only Boston player to get on base reached first through an error in the opening inning. Derringer finally was tapped for three singles and a run in the ninth.

It was Derringer's second success of the season.

There was only one other game scheduled in the major leagues yesterday and in this the New York Yankees squeezed out an 11-10 decision over Cleveland when Relief Pitcher Tom Ferrick made a wild throw on Joe Gordon's sacrifice bunt with two on base in the 11th inning.

It was a suitable payoff for a game in which each club used three pitchers and the world champions made 16 hits and three errors to Cleveland's 15 hits and two miscues.

* * *

Ken Keltner made five hits and Jeff Heath produced his seventh and eighth home runs of the year and singled home the tying run in the ninth inning after Keltner had tripled.

* * *

Cleveland could have recaptured second place in the American league from the idle Detroit Tigers by winning, but the Yankees made it their 26th triumph in 31. As a sideline, Joe Gordon stretched his hitting streak to 25 games and Buddy Hassett extended his to 20.

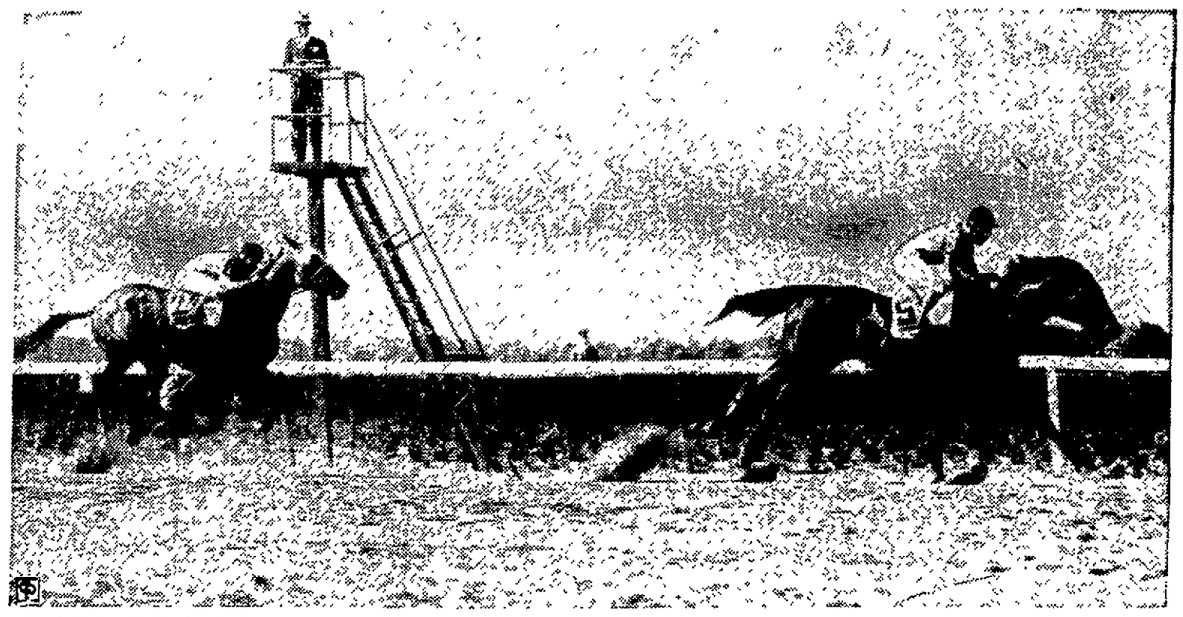
They'll Tangle Again In July's Arlington Classic



Shut Out and Alsab, the leading three-year-olds, have another chance to settle their feud in the Arlington Classic at Chicago in July. Shut Out, owned by the Greentree stable, beat Alsab in the Kentucky Derby. In the Preakness, Alsab won easily, Shut Out finishing way back. Next come the Withers, Alsab winning that although Shut Out was not entered. Last Saturday Shut Out took the lead again by winning the rich Belmont. Alsab ran a poor second, losing by three lengths, as shown above.

Southworth Gets Trophy

Speechmaking Fear Makes Billy Glum.

By CARL LUNDQUIST

ST. LOUIS, Mo—(U.P.)—For a study in glumness take Billy Southworth of the St. Louis Cardinals, who strangely enough is going to be cited tonight as the best manager in the major leagues.

You would think he had the Phils to handle instead of his spirited young club which finaly had gotten to a good hold on second place and doesn't seem likely now to give it up.

* * *

Bill the Kid isn't butting his head against the concrete walls of the dugout for nothing. His cup of gloom is bubbling over like a warm bottle of beer and unless some of his national league colleagues do something about the runaway Bums from Brooklyn, he'll have those dugout doldrums the rest of the summer.

The Dodgers are coming to town tonight and that doesn't worry him half as much as the acceptance speech he'll have to make on the field when he gets the Sporting News' annual award for the best managerial job of the 1941 season. The Cardinals have taken the Dodgers into camp in three games out of four this year and with their characteristic cockiness they are talking already about sweeping the three game series "with the Bums."

The award goes to Southworth because of the manner in which he kept his team up in the race until the last week of the season, despite the fact that player after player was knocked out with injuries, J. G. Taylor Spink, publisher of the Sporting News said in naming Southworth for the award.

The St. Louis fans think that he has done just as commendable a job this year, despite a late start which may prove disastrous to the team when it swings into the final phases of the race. Southworth's young pitchers finally are clicking, the team has won nine of its last 13 games, the batsmen have to some extent shaken off the southpaw pitching jinx and a new infield combination is going beyond expectations both offensively and defensively.

The tearful part of the story is that the Dodgers are traveling at an even faster pace. Their pitching, too, is phenomenal and the hits come fast and furious whereever the Dodgers go, although Southworth's hurlers haven't had any difficulty in stopping them.

Reiser, Phelps Battle For Top

NEW YORK—(AP)—The American league has been having a two-man race for batting honors almost since the opening of the season and now the National league is getting some of the same.

Pete Reiser, last year's batting champion in the senior circuit, has been sprinting during the last week and today had a lusty .365 average, close on the heels of Gordon (Babe) Phelps, Pittsburgh catcher.

Phelps has been out of action because of a spiked heel and made his first appearances in the Pirate lineup in more than a week on Sunday. He was called on to pinch hit twice and made one hit to inflate his average to .375.

Joe Gordon of the New York Yankees, riding the crest of a 25-game batting streak, still is the American league leader with .388, thirteen points ahead of Bobby Doerr of the Boston Red Sox.

Home Clubs Fare Poorly In Mad-A

SPRINGFIELD — (AP) — Not a home club had things to its own liking around the Mid-Atlantic league circuit yesterday, but nowhere did the locals fare so badly as here.

The Cardinals, submerged in the cellar, were pummeled by Dayton's 14-hit attack and dropped their series opener 9 to 1.

Canton took a firm grip on fourth place with a 3 to 2 victory at Erie.

Zanesville stepped a bit closer to the league-leading Charleston Senators with a 4 to 1 victory in the West Virginia city.

Bill Shirley, Little Rock Arkansas Democrat: "When Harry Pulliam was president of the National league he had a little sign hanging on the wall of his office which said: 'Take nothing for granted in baseball.' Now, how did he know that some day Vernon Gomez would get four hits in one ball game."

CAPPING THE CLIMAX.

They tell more stories than you can believe about happenings in the Kitty league, but until further notice this should stand as the error record: The other night John Pavoris, Fulton's rookie third baseman, fielded a slow bounder. . . . As he straightened up, his cap flew off and he threw the ball right into the cap. . . . Together they sailed over the pitcher's head, grazed the umpire and landed halfway between the mound and first base. . . . The base runners were too surprised to run and the first baseman didn't know where to look. . . . Pavoris finally dashed across and retrieved the pill himself, but not until two runs had scored.

Barnes Plays Ashland Tie

12-Inning Game Ends In Deadlock Monday.

Barnes Manufacturing softballers battled the Ashland Times-Gazette's young team to a 3-3 deadlock in 12 innings at Ashland Brookside park last evening, scoring the tying run in the ninth inning.

The Ashland team, composed almost entirely of high school players of the past two seasons, with the veteran Mike Bodner on the hill, got away to a two-run lead in the fifth.

* * *

After Barnes had tied it up with a pair of markers in the sixth and seventh, Ashland came back with another marker in the last of the lucky frame, but Stub Winebrenner had them under control the rest of the way.

Winebrenner allowed only six hits over the 12-frame stretch, while Barnes collected eight off Bodner.

Jones Tries Golf Comeback

Attempts Leap Back to Glory After 12 Years.

By CHARLES CHAMBERLAIN

CHICAGO — (AP) — Immortal Bobby Jones, after 12 years of virtual retirement, will attempt to leap back into golfing glory in the Hale America national open next week.

Playing some of his best golf in a decade, as indicated by a par-slashing 54 holes last week-end, he's coming here to win, although he won't admit it.

New golfing greats have remade the headlines since stocky Bobby collected his famous grand slam—winning the British amateur, British open, U. S. amateur in succession—and announced his retirement. The Augusta masters has been his lone annual return to competition.

The Hale America at Ridgemoor becomes the first tournament outside the masters that Bobby has entered, and there is much speculation that he will do better in it than he ever has done in the masters.

At his home in Atlanta last night, Jones said he would not have entered the Hale America "if it weren't for patriotic considerations.

"I felt it my duty to accept the U. S. G. A.'s invitation and wanted to aid in raising money for the USO and navy relief."

PROS PRACTICE FOR TOLEDO TOURNAMENT

TOLEDO—(INS)—Practicing up today for the eighth annual Inverness Invitational, round robin tournament which begins here Thursday, were Horton Smith, Ben Hogan, Herman Barron and Lloyd Mangrum and host pro Byron Nelson.

Of the 16 golfers who will play in the tournament, the greater name golfers are Denny Shute, Henry Picard, Lawson Little, Sam Byrd, Herman Keiser, Jimmy Thompson, Jimmy Hines, Melvin (Chuck) Harbert, Chandler Harper, and E. J. (Dutch) Harrison.

Saints Lose 14 Straight

Batting Slump of Three Sluggers Given Blame.

(By Associated Press)

St. Paul's 14-game losing streak, which is three short of the American association record set in 1905 by Kansas City, can be traced to the beginning of a batting slump by the team's three leading sluggers.

Several weeks ago Phil Weintraub, Frank Drews and Jim Grant, first, second and third basemen, respectively, were among the league's top batters. Suddenly, they started slipping.

Weintraub took the biggest nose-dive, from top to tenth. The trouble with St. Paul is that all three of its trustworthy hitters hit the skids together.

* * *

The Saints dropped No. 14 last night, Louisville rallying for four runs in the seventh to whip up an 8-3 verdict.

But perhaps Alan Hunt will guide the Saints off the beaten path. The former Indianapolis outfielder joined St. Paul last night and hit a triple.

Indianapolis downed Minneapolis, 5-3, making it three of four in the series.

* * *

Even the Brooklyn Dodgers failed to stop high riding Kansas City, the Blues winning an exhibition game, 7-6. In another exhibition, Milwaukee bowed to the Chicago Cubs, 6-1.

LANCASTER, Pa.—(AP)—Robert Eicholtz made a hole-in-one at Media Heights golf club—but he had to score it on his card as a three.

Raps At Hall Of Fame Door

Derringer Shows Old Brand of Mound Stuff.

NEW YORK — (INS) — Although he's 36 years old and has been pitching baseballs for 15 years, big Paul Derringer of the Cincinnati Reds keeps right on banging against the door of that no-hit hall of fame. Last season he hurled a pair of one-hitters and yesterday came within one inning of turning the Boston Braves back hitless. Then, as it has happened to so many pitchers so many times in the past when they felt secure with their no-hitters, the thing suddenly was spoiled.

* * *

In a minimum of words, the Braves made three quick singles in the ninth and scored a run to deprive Derringer of even a shutout after he had allowed no one to get on base. One Brave had made it through the Reds' only error, but that was no fault of Derringer's.

The broad-shouldered Kentuckyian, a gent who towers 6 feet 3½ inches and weighs slightly better than 200 pounds, is one of the men Deacon Bill McKechnie is banking on this season for an eventual spurt to the National league pennant, and if Derringer can come through with a few more like that the Deacon's worries will be far less burdensome.

As things stand at the moment, the Dodgers are seven lengths in front of the Cards, who are 2½ in front of the Reds and there is still time for the Reds to catch up—if Mr. Derringer is fixing to put that big Kentucky frame of his in the way of opposing batters as he did yesterday. The rest will have to help, too, of course.

But the point is Derringer won only his second game yesterday against three defeats for the season, and it looks now as though he is going to start chucking, which would be bad news for some of the rest of the clubs.

In 1939 and 1940 he contributed a large chunk of what it took for the Reds to get into the World series, when he won 25 games against seven losses in that first year and 20 against 12 losses the next as the Reds went on to their postseason tussles with the New York Yankees and then the Detroit Tigers.

* * *

Prior to that, he had won 21 and lost 14 in 1938. Last season he slumped to 12 wins and 14 losses and the Reds slumped with him. That was one of the worst seasons he had experienced at Cincinnati since he was traded away by the St. Louis Cardinals in 1933.

Pitching put the Reds in the World series in 1939 and 1940, as it nearly always puts every club in there, and the Reds made it in Derringer's good years.

SEAMLESS TUBE BLANKS PROVIDENTS

SHELBY — The Ohio Seamless Tube Co. strengthened its lead in the Shelby Softball League by defeating the Provident Loans, 4 to 0, yesterday.

Bob Laubie, former Shelby high school grid, basketball and baseball star, pitched a two hit ball game for the Tube. Glenn Irey collected two triples.

Boy Manager Bearing Up

Hasn't Even Lost Any Sleep Over Indians.

By JACK GUENTHER

NEW YORK — (U.P.) — If you've been wondering how baseball's foremost boy genius is bearing up under the strain of managing a major league club at the advanced age of 24, you may rest assured that he is bearing up stoutly. Lou Boudreau hasn't lost his hair, his faith in human nature or his sense of humor. In fact, Cleveland's freshman pilot claims he hasn't even lost any sleep.

* * *

"There isn't much point to brooding about things," Boudreau explained rather jerkily in the sweaty confines of the dressing room while his trainer massaged him so vigorously his teeth rattled. "I just make my decisions on the spot and as quickly as possible. Once they are made there is no use in second-guessing them."

* * *

Lou's calm demeanor affirmed his words. The Indians had just lost a heart-rending, soul-searing game to the Yankees, 11-10, in extra innings. In dropping this one, they also dropped an important series. Boudreau should have been as nervous as the house cat at the Westchester Kennel club.

Instead, he was as cool as a mother-in-law's kiss.

Yes, he agreed, the Yankees are tough characters. But, then, they always were. No, he didn't think it yet was time to concede the pennant. Nor could he name a team to beat New York out. The immediate battle, he thought, was one for second place because four teams are grouped within a dozen percentage points.

One of those four is Cleveland. As you may remember, when Boudreau was sworn in as chief and ace medicine man of the Indians early last winter, he said his only goal was the first division. He hasn't officially changed that prediction as yet, but he is hoping he can surpass it. In the scramble now taking place, he has a chance.

"You might say that we rise and fall on our pitching," he explained as he jumped from the rubbing table. "During that 13-game winning streak we had pretty good pitching. Then, somehow, the pitching slumped and everything else seemed to slump with it.

The pitching, incidentally, has contributed lavishly to Boudreau's problems. While he is playing short-stop, shifting the infield defense and directing the general team strategy, he also must determine almost to the second when a pitcher should be sent to the showers.

* * *

"I've learned to make up my mind before I walk to the box," he said. "I know what I'm going to do before I get there. Then I just go ahead and do it. I no longer ask the boys if they are okay or feel that they should stay in the game. Who ever heard of a pitcher who didn't feel fine and want to stay in?"

* * *

Despite his many admirable traits, Boudreau can't be expected to lift the Indians to a pennant. It is doubtful if anyone could transform the Tribe into a genuine threat. They have high voltage bats and the infield is tight, but that old debbil pitching is the critical point. There simply aren't enough rugged regulars to go around the circuit.

Inspiring Scene.

Frank Morgan furnishes the big scene in "Tortilla Flats," when, as an old wood-cutter of simple faith, he re-enacts for his five dogs the church ceremony in which he presents a golden candlestick to the memory of St. Francis. Morgan has the role of "the Pirate" described in John Steinbeck's book from which the picture takes its name. Spencer Tracy, Hedy Lamarr and John Garfield are among the principals in the cast, Tracy playing the role of the ingenious "Pilon," who manages his friends to suit his own ends.

Gold Rush.

"The Spoilers," Rex Beach's powerful story that has one of the most powerful hand to hand encounters ever shown on the screen, is now showing at the Madison with Randolph Scott, John Wayne and Marlene Dietrich in the leading roles. Laid in the Klondike at the time of the gold rush in '98 the picture deals with the battle of two men over a dance hall queen. "True to the Army," the second picture has Jerry Colonna and Judy Canova.

Technicolor Comedy.

Bob Hope, Vera Zorina and Victor Moore supply the fun in "Louisiana Purchase," technicolor comedy showing at the Ritz. Based on the efforts of a group of politicians to square themselves with an appraising senator the picture presents Hope as the catspaw of the ring who persuades a dancer to help him out of his troubles. Irene Bordoni and Maxie Rosenbloom are in the cast. "Mail Train," with Gordon Harker is the second picture.

Hawaiian Tempo.

Lupe Velez has the leading role in "Honolulu Lu," the Park attraction with Leo Carrillo, Roger Clark and Marjorie Gateson. The star appears in a dual role as the charming member of a distinguished Spanish family and later as the sweetheart of the fleet in a Honolulu hot spot. "Remember Pearl Harbor," the co-attraction, is a tribute to the men who defend the country's far-flung frontiers but is purely fictional in story.

CHAPTER I.

Kay Kenyon stepped onto the side porch. She stood for a moment, breathing deep of the lush night air, then went on down the worn stone steps into the garden.

The petunia boxes, around the porch were sagging, she noted, and the petunias weren't doing so well either. They needed water.

"We're on the rocks," she told herself, and felt her throat tighten.

Kay walked on into the garden. She had in mind a clump of white lilacs down near the pasture where grandpa used to keep his two pet sheep. There was nothing like that perfume — the lilacs, the pasture.

Halfway down the garden path Kay's foot slipped, and she landed flat on her face in a bed of something that smelled sweet, but scratched sharply.

She gathered herself up, and took stock of the damage that had been done to her evening dress. A skinned knee or a bumped head might repair itself, given time; but a torn and soiled evening dress—well that was something else again, especially if it was a dress that had been turned, made over and dyed for three years.

"It's a mess," she said, examining the scuffed hole in the front where her knee had poked through, and the torn hem ragged around her slippers. "You've served me well old pinkie." She gathered her skirts high, "let's see the end of the path."

With gathered skirt Kay went along the path toward the pasture, the white lilacs.

Nothing had been done about this garden path for years, she was thinking. Nothing has been done about anything for years. Things have been left to take care of themselves or fall apart. What's to become of us? We can't go on like this.

Voices behind her broke through her dark brooding. She was in no mood to indulge the idle chatter. She had a desire, an ache almost, to be alone. There was the lilac clump, just ahead. She stepped off the path into the shadow of the great bushes . . . actually they had grown to the dignity of trees through the years. Behind their thick branches she could be free to pursue her gloomy phantoms or be pursued by them.

* * *

The voices were coming closer. Kay could distinguish them now; the high-pitched soprano with the metallic "ping" in it . . . that would be Thalia (Tally) Holmes, the verbal gossip columnist for the town's elect; the throaty contralto of monosyllabic interest . . . Eunice Ross who aspired to social arbitership and — yes, the light masculine note with the accent of cynicism would be Ronald Farnsworth . . . Ronnie, of THE Farnsworths, the town's most eligible bachelor, catch de lux for matrimonially-inclined maidens and for ambitious mothers.

Tally was saying:

"—how they do it. It's amazin'. Everyone knows that since Kay's father passed out overnight, the law firm of Kenyon Brothers has practically stymied. Elsa's dad—he was the senior partner, too—is a nice kind of bunny, but a nit-wit. He plays a mean violin in the gloaming—in the court room he's a blackout. Remember the time Elsa asked him to play something on that old family blunderbuss in the Kenyon back parlor so we could dance, and he gave out with a load of Grief or Beethoven or some of those mossy dodos? Elsa was fit to be tied, but Kay sat by the piano pretending to be entranced. It's the cultural side Kay'd like to make us think she has. Cultural—ha!"

"Yes," Eunice Ross said, slipping her hand under Ronnie Farnsworth's arm and crowding her long slim body closer to him, "The Kenyon's are a bit on the dull side."

Ronnie laughed.

"Really, ladies," he said, "why not sheathe the claws? Kay never looked more wantable; Elsa drips hospitality; the food is fit for the gods. So what?"

"Food. That's it," Tally gabbed. "Chicken a la king, baked ham, avocado salad . . . you'd think we were aboard a luxury liner. When we all know . . ."

"That's the way to a man's heart is . . . you finish it for me Eunice," Ronnie yawned. "Tally's so busy scratching she's forgotten her elementals."

Tally bristled.

"I know all about the way to a man's heart," she said. "I also know that nothing plus nothing never made the kind of a party Elsa is throwing tonight. Get a look at the family chairs. They're so worn to a nub they're collapsible. As for the rug . . . threadbare is hardly the word."

"Odd, isn't it?" Eunice said.

"What's odd?" Tally wanted to know.

"Getting by on . . . on nerve."

"What a nice lot of little playmates you are," Ronnie said, flicking his cigaret into the path and scrunching it under foot. "Full of sweetness and light."

"You can forget the sweetness . . . the light too," Tally said bitterly. "We know you're blind about Kay. We know she's blind too . . . she can't see you. Why not consider the lesser of the Kenyon crop, Elsa. She'd snap you up so quick your head would swim."

"Thanks," Ronnie said. "If there is one thing I like to do it is to swim."

"Boring," Eunice said.

"What's boring?" from Tally. "You wanted to get away from it all . . . you wanted to be under the moon with Ron."

"Skip it." Eunice stretched her arms. "What a night! Stars, moon, lilacs."

"This place gets me down," Tally complained. "It's so obviously falling apart. And the strain to keep up the camouflage—to hold to the Kenyon standard of largess and superiority — you actually can hear what's left of the Kenyon spine creak with the effort. What I'm wondering is—can they hold out until some generous gent comes along and tosses out a life-line via the marriage altar?"

Ronnie whistled. A long, low penetrating whistle, punctuated by a snapping of fingers.

"You've got it Tally," he said. "Thanks for the lift. Now all I have to do is to persuade Kay I'm the one man in the world to play husband and savior."

"You wouldn't," Eunice said. There was an undertone of panic in her calm.

Ronnie laughed: "Oh wouldn't I? If you don't mind, lovlies, I'd like to return to the scene of action . . . I mean let's trek back. Some guy might beat me to the rescue.

Kay Kenyon, crouching against a lilac branch, stiffened. The branch waved, rustled.

"What was that?" Tally asked, peaking her ears. "Behind those bushes . . . there's someone behind those bushes."

Kay froze into inaction.

"Be yourself, Tally," Eunice said. "Ghosts, maybe, or rabbits."

Tally raised her arms toward the sky, looked upward. A gesture of tolerance.

"Make mine rabbits," she said. "Ghosts give me goose-pimples."

"You have such a sweet tongue, Eunice," Ronnie said. "And Tally, a big help too, if you're on the way down. I'm going back to the house. Are you with me, or are you staying here to—chase rabbits?"

"But Ronny," Tally shrieked.

"Back," Eunice said. "I loath rabbits."

The situation in the Kenyon house was desperate. The land that had stretched out into hundreds of acres for the first Kenyons, now had shrunk to a five-acre plot surrounding the big house, five acres ill-kept and productive of nothing except an apple orchard which was a maze of broken trees and rotting limbs, some berry patches . . . strawberries gone wild, raspberries a tangle of bramble.

The Kenyons, once mighty in the community, now were among the least of these. Disintegration had set in. Major "Jim" Kenyon (he had been a leader of men in the World war 1) did what he could to retrieve the family fortune. He was Kay Kenyon's father, and a lawyer whose brilliance would have shown in higher places had he not been welded to the reclamation of his family fortune, his family position.

Jim Kenyon's mistake was that he worked too hard and too long for a lost cause. He exerted his mind and he squandered his body on reclamation of a cause already lost. The influenza bug that came along found Jim Kenyon a soft spot for a touch. The morning after they took Jim Kenyon to the hospital it was time to sing his requiem.

Jim's wife had been Ellen Macon of a family the equal, even the peer, of the Kenyons. Ellen was a shy gentle soul highly sensitive, utterly helpless. Jim Kenyon left her to care for their small daughter Kay with little money and faint heart for the task.

The Jim Kenyons were living in the big house. Jim also was carrying along his elder brother, Asa Kenyon, who occupied one of the run-down tenant houses on the remaining five acres. Asa was the father of Elsa. Also he was the husband of Cora Kenyon who had been one of the Slaters, a middle-class family with little culture but much ambition.

At Jim Kenyon's death the Kenyons decided they had better pool their resources, slender as these were. The Asa Kenyons moved into the big house. Cora, a woman with a hawkish nose, had been a Slater most of her life, took charge of the Kenyon house. She was raring to go; lack of funds could not stop her.

"We're in the big house now," she told her daughter, Elsa, 18. "We're where we ought to've been all this time we were living in that tumble-down oversee's place. If your father had any gumption. He's the oldest Kenyon. But Jim was smart. He worked. He didn't set around scraping a violin like your father. Now we got our chance, daughter, we make the most of it."

So the senior Kenyons, Asa, Cora, Elsa moved into the big house. With a definite idea, on Cora's part, of "taking over." Asa was not too much interested in the move. It interfered with his violin. Elsa was in a fever of excitement.

"Can you imagine?" she said to Tally Holmes, the town gossip. "We've been stuck here in this terrible old shack—you know father is the senior Kenyon and we should have been in the big house. It was only because—"

"Because Jim Kenyon was the last of the Kenyons . . . unless something unexpected happens," Tally said with tight lips. "Why kid yourself, Elsa? Your Uncle Jim had what it takes. If he'd had the break he deserved, things would have been different for all of you."

"Things are different," Elsa laughed unpleasantly. "The rightful Kenyons are taking over the old homestead, and from now on this town can watch our smoke."

"Not I," Tally said. "Smoke gets in my eyes."

That had been three years ago; three years, during which the combined Kenyons carried on with a determination worthy of a nobler cause. They would be as the lilies of the field, which toil not, neither do they spin. To do this it was necessary to draw constantly upon the slender means Jim Kenyon had left his wife and daughter. The inadequate competence had dwindled away, first in sizable chunks for whatever project offered; later with increasing consideration and haggling over the purpose; now in tiny crumbs for grim necessity. Only a frightening few dollars of it remained. Cora Kenyon, assumed the attitude that what belonged to one Kenyon belonged to all and the gentle Ellen, more mouse-like than ever since her widowhood, accepted the grinding Cora's rule.

Take this party, that even now was going on apace under the decaying Kenyon rooftree.

"But Cora," Ellen said when Asa's wife announced there would be a buffet supper for her daughter Elsa's "crowd" the following Saturday evening . . . say about twenty of Elsa's particular friends . . . and no pinching on the food or on anything else. There'll be a special punch, with something in it beside tap-water. "But Cora," Ellen protested "such a party would cost quite a lot. Do you think we ought to afford it? There's been nothing coming in for weeks. The bank notified me yesterday."

MURDER ON THE AVENUE

"Why did that interest her?"

"Let's not pursue the subject. Alma had an unholy liking for me and she was—er—interested in my financial prospects."

"Oh, all right; the secret is of no value then. Poor girl, she must have had a hard life with that brute of a man."

"No, he wasn't brutal to her—until the last. I seem unable to sense it, Stone. He adored her—"

"He had a brutal nature, Herrick; Dunn told me of his killing a canary because its singing annoyed him."

"Yes, he had that streak, and his temper was uncontrollable when suddenly roused. But I don't see how you ever thought of him as the criminal!"

"There were plenty of clues. The lucky piece he carried in his pocket, and which fell on the couch as he struggled with Alma. The conflicting stories told by you men who were in and out of the room. The lie Miss Emmy told to shield her brother, whom she already suspected, I am sure. The bangle that Haynes gave Alma, and she pretended it was you."

"How was that a clue?"

"Because Hugh hated you worst of all. And for her to accept a gift from you was more than he could stand. I know, because Dickson overheard a word or two of their quarrel. The man was loyal to McCleod, until I put the fear of God into him, and made him fess up . . . Where do you want me to drop you? Home?"

"No, put me out at Bliss' hotel, the Wantley. I must tell him. What am I to do about Miss Deane?"

"You must go to see her, at once. And don't treat her as if she was a black beetle!"

"I never did! That's her imagination. Yes, I'll see her and we'll come to some arrangement."

* * *

The next day Herrick did see Una Deane, and Miss Malcolm. He appeared, smiling and handsome, and bubbling over with joy at his freedom. Miss Malcolm was heartily glad at his good news, and told him so.

Then he turned to the girl, and made her a proposal of marriage.

"And," he added, "rest assured, should you want it, I will put no obstacle in the way of your getting a divorce."

Una, who had been falling in love with him more deeply every minute said: "Would you put an obstacle in the way of my not getting a divorce?"

And the brute of a man answered: "We won't cross that bridge until we come to it." But the smile that he gave her carried no implication of a black beetle.

THE END.

At the conclusion of yesterday's episode of "Murder on the Avenue," the line "The End" was inadvertently printed. Here are the closing paragraphs of the story.

REPORTING IN GERMANY'S DONE FOR REPORTERS

American Correspondent Tells How Press Bureau Dictates What May Be Printed.

(Editor's Note: Home after five months' internment in Germany, Louis P. Lochner, chief of the former Berlin bureau of the Associated Press and Wide World, describes the German press in this sixth of a daily series for The News-Journal.)

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER

NEW YORK—(Wide World)—The Nazi editor or reporter writes as he is told to write. If he doesn't, he is, at best, blotted out from the lists of his profession. More likely he is headed for a concentration camp.

He is told in the minutest detail what he may write, what he may not touch upon, what emphasis he must place upon a given item, how he is to comment upon it, when to harp on a certain theme and when to drop it.

Nothing is left to chance, and very little to imagination.

Here's the set-up:

Every morning the press officers of the various ministries filter into the Goebbels ministry of propaganda and public enlightenment such items of news as their minister of their department chief approves. This does not mean, necessarily, that the item will be released for publication.

It may happen that the experts in the propaganda ministry consider the time inauspicious, in which case the ministry in question, too, is barred from releasing it.

Or it may be that even the ministry, in relaying it to the propaganda department, desired merely that it be communicated to the German newsmen for their information but not for publication.

At 10 o'clock every morning, Goebbels' handymen foregather to learn what they may say to the press, what information should be withheld, what commentary should be offered, which items must be carried as privileged matter (and thus made obligatory upon the papers to carry), what evasive replies should be told in response to questions anticipated.

Every official in the ministry thus knows what he is to say during the ensuing hours. So do the corresponding officials in the various ministries, who usually attend this pow-wow or at least are advised of its proceedings. Ring up whom you will after this conference, and you will get practically the same stock answer. Only very rarely is a man to be found who will even bother to tell the same story in his own words.

No sooner has this morning conference taken place, than radio speakers of the ministry get busy on an inside-office broadcast to the 40-odd sub-offices of the propaganda ministry scattered throughout the reich. The press officials in these branches thus receive identical instructions.

When, therefore, the editor of the Frankfurter Zeitung at Frankfurter inquires concerning the news and how to handle it, the local propaganda representative will give him exactly the same information that a few minutes later, the Berlin correspondent for his paper will receive.

For, at 11 a. m. the Berlin press, including representatives of all important provincial papers, is received at the propaganda ministry and told, "you may write this; you must not say that."

The men selected for this conference are a picked lot. They are under oath not to reveal what is said during these conferences. But during my 20-years' stay in Germany I got to know many German editors personally. From them I know how they often blush at what is expected of them. Many feel very unhappy and wish they might get out of the meshes of the ministry.

A few years ago we had the case of one such correspondent who felt so humiliated at what was happening in these daily conferences that he secretly took notes (the correspondents must not take notes while the "interpretations" are handed out to them), which he then turned over to the representative of a British daily. Unfortunately this colleague, bent upon scoring a scoop, published textually a number of instructions and "verbotens" given during a certain week.

The propaganda ministry immediately invited two Gestapo officials to sit unobtrusively in the conference and to observe who was taking copious notes. The man was discovered, then shadowed for several days and finally arrested as he was about to slip a manuscript to a representative of the British newsman in a billiard hall. He was sent up for life. Since that time there have been few transgressions.

On many items of news Adolf Hitler himself reserves the right to determine what commentary must be given.

After the German editors had taken their instructions, the foreign press was received daily, as most of us could not be regimented (our number, however, became smaller and smaller as Germany occupied one country after another and as representatives of the few remaining neutral countries became more and more afraid), naturally the tone toward us was a cajoling rather than a mandatory one.

Even then on several occasions the official would forget whom he had before him and read from his manuscript, "the press will write as follows." Blushingly, he would quickly change over to "gentlemen of the foreign press, the German viewpoint on this-or-that situation is—."

DRIVERS FINED

One Sent to Jail After He Ignores License Order.

Two motorists were arraigned in municipal court yesterday on traffic violation charges and the bond of another was forfeited.

Benjamin Beer, Mansfield R. D. 3, was fined $10 and costs after pleading guilty to a speeding charge. Police said he was driving more than 48 miles an hour on Park avenue west.

Henry Hunter, Columbus, posted $16.30 bond and waived appearance in municipal court when arrested by city police on a speeding charge. Police charged he was driving more than 55 miles per hour on Lexington avenue.

John W. Jackson, Lexington, was sentenced to 60 days in Richland county jail after pleading guilty to a charge of operating a motor vehicle while his license was under suspension. He was arrested on North Diamond street late Saturday.

50 Registered In Reading Club At Public Library

First day registration for the Treasure Seekers' club, summer reading course for children and young people sponsored by the Mansfield Public Library, stood at 50 today, indicating that the club may have a record enrollment this year.

Enrollment in the club will continue as long as there is time in which the members may complete 10 books and submit written reports before Sept. 5.

Although the club membership is limited to third to ninth grade pupils, children enrolled in the first to third grades may also participate in the summer reading program by having their parents indicate the books the children have read. This younger group will be known as "The Shovel Bearers." Miss Myra Lorimer, children's librarian, is in charge of the program.

WITH REGARD TO A CARD OF THANKS

Very often a Card of Thanks in The News-Journal meets a need which can hardly be solved in any other way. A "Card of Thanks" can now be arranged by telephone: Dial 4251-6, ask for Miss Lane or Miss Stone, either will be glad to render whatever service and advice you need.

STOCKS RESUME RECOVERY ON MARKET TODAY

Federal Reserve Reports Loans to Commerce and Industry Drop.

NEW YORK—(AP)—Stocks generally continued on the recovery trail in today's early market dealings.

At a fairly active opening gainers of fractions to a point or so included Du Pont, U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, American Telephone, Chesapeake and Ohio, Chrysler and Phelps Dodge.

Financial analysts studied the Federal Reserve summary disclosing loans to industry, commerce and agriculture by member banks in 101 cities dropped $15,000,000 during the week ended June 3. It was the third successive weekly decline in this barometer.

Holders of steels noted the figures of the war production board indicating steel plate shipments in May rose to 1,012,194 tons from 895,971 in April. More conversions of strip mills, it was forecast, would bring additional increases of plate output for shipbuilding and other war needs in coming months.

TELLS STORY OF PACIFIC BATTLE

Ensign Watched Three Jap Aircraft Carriers Burn as He Floated on Raft.

to sink it with its crew. He saw a destroyer rescue some men.

As night fell, he saw Japanese planes still hovering about their mother ship, which now was utterly useless to them, and next day, when a navy plane rescued him, black life rafts, the debris and great oil patches were alone left to tell of the disaster which had befallen the enemy fleet.

Gay was certain that one Kaga carrier was sunk and thought the two other carriers probably sank. They were burning fiercely when he last saw them and United States forces were on the scene in force.

Gay took off from a plane carrier with other planes of his squadron on the morning of June 4 when the Japanese made their attack on Midway.

It was mid-morning when the planes reached the scene. They saw below them, on the sea, three Japanese carriers in line, 10 miles between the first and third, with a considerable force of cruisers and destroyers around them.

Hundreds of anti-aircraft guns burst into fire when their planes were sighted.

The Americans attacked through Japanese fighter planes which raced in to challenge them.

Gay's machine gunner was hit, but the plane kept on. Gay held his torpedo until he was almost on the carrier. As he let it go, he swung his plane sharply over his target and sped astern.

An explosive shell tore through his rudder controls and seared his left leg.. A bullet struck his upper left arm

Gay brought his plane into a stall and pancaked into the sea. His gunner had died. The radio man, trapped, could not pull free.

At 11 a. m., alone, struggling in the water in the middle of the enemy fleet, Gay watched his wrecked plane slide under the waves.

As it disappear there floated out from it a bag containing his deflated rubber life raft.

Gay struggled to the raft, which was awash because it had not been inflated.

Gay watched all three carriers, taking on planes, the Kagas at each end of the line with the smaller one between them. One of the Kagas was burning fiercely even while planes landed on it.

Twenty minutes later American navy dive bombers roared over the Japanese formation.

Gay watched as they shrieked down. He saw them score direct hits on the other carriers. Great fires burst out in both ships. Smoke rose in sky-darkening clouds. Every now and then an internal explosion would shake one of them.

When the attack ended and the smoke cleared somewhat Gay saw the second Kaga carrier aflame from end to end During the afternoon the Japanese tried frantically to stop the fires.

During the night Gay slept fitfully on his raft.

It was near morning when he was started from his troubled sleep by three explosions. He believes the Japanese had planted demolition charges in the carriers to sink them

Several hours after sunrise a navy patrol plane spotted Gay's rubber boat. A sea plane came and picked him up.

Gay's wounds are not serious. He is a graduate of Texas Agricultural and Mechanical college, a civil and mechanical engineer, and took his flight training at Jacksonville and Miami, Fla.
